THE MEDICAL COLLEGE

PURPOSE

Scientific study integrated with patient care is the core of medical education at Cornell University Medical College. The Medical College seeks excellence in its students, and expects those studying here today to emerge tomorrow as leaders in the field of medicine. To cultivate leadership potential, Cornell strives to stimulate creativity and foster independent thought and study. At Cornell, research and the advancement of medical knowledge are not only ends in themselves, but are integrated in a vision of the scientific basis of a thorough medical education. To promote the development of true social commitment, the Medical College exposes students to responsibilities in a variety of practice settings, with the unwavering goal of optimal patient care.

Medical education at Cornell aims at development of individuals who not only recognize and are dedicated to the highest quality patient care, but also understand their responsibility for contributions through personal scholarship. An unusually large number of medical leaders over the years have emerged from Cornell University Medical College.

Central to its educational mission is the Medical College's role within a premier academic medical center. The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, consisting of The New York Hospital, Cornell University Medical College and the Graduate School of Medical Sciences, is an academic medical center committed to excellence in patient care, teaching, research, and the advancement of the art and science of medicine. Its geographic proximity to The Rockefeller University, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, and The Hospital for Special Surgery creates a national resource for medical and scientific leadership.

MISSION

The following mission statement for the Medical College and the Graduate School of Medical Sciences was adopted by the Faculty Councils in 1996.

Cornell University Medical College and Cornell University Graduate School of Medical Sciences are committed to excellence in research, teaching, patient care, and the advancement of the art and science of medicine. To this end, their mission is to provide the finest education possible for medical students and students pursuing advanced degrees in the biomedical sciences, to conduct research at the cutting edge of knowledge, to improve the health care of the nation and the world both now and for future generations, and to provide the highest quality of clinical care for the communities they serve. Success in any of these contributes to success in the others.

In pursuit of this mission, the Medical College and Graduate School recruit faculty and staff who excel in their field and provide a creative, stable, intellectually stimulating and supportive working environment conducive to success in each aspect of their professional endeavors. In the selection of faculty, significant consideration is given to their potential as role models for the future leaders of academic medicine whom they will train. The Medical College and Graduate School are committed to the maintenance and continued development of a community of scientific and clinical scholarship. Where appropriate to further this mission, they will seek and cultivate affiliations with other institutions of excellence in clinical and biomedical sciences.

The faculty must be dedicated to the achievement of excellence in educating the physicians and biomedical scientists of the future for leadership in research, patient care, education and community service. The Medical College and Graduate School must support this ideal through the development of innovative and stimulating curricula, and through the provision of appropriate resources to achieve this goal. They must respond rapidly to changing societal needs and new technologies.

Cornell University Medical College and Cornell University Graduate School of Medical Sciences are committed to the delivery of the highest quality health care that serves the needs of the local, regional, national and world communities. The institution is dedicated to the provision of health education, prevention, detection and treatment of disease, and the development of a research agenda and public health policy responsive and sensitive to the needs of these communities.

The leadership of the institution must direct its efforts to ensure the success of the creation, transmission and application of knowledge.

HISTORY

An abiding focus on the science behind medical knowledge and techniques has been central at Cornell since the school's establishment in 1898. Cornell University President Jacob Gould Schurman, in his address at the Medical College's opening ceremonies, set the tone for the decades to come. "What is needed for the training of physicians and surgeons today?" asked Schurman. "I answer, first, science; secondly, science; thirdly, science." Delivered with a missionary's fervor 100 years ago, these words remain notable not simply for the way they continue to affirm the emphasis placed by Medical College faculty on the scientific basis of medical training, but as an indication of how far the field has traveled in the last century, and how great a part Cornell University Medical College has played in that development.

In 1898, the field of medicine was only beginning to stress a scientific foundation, and most medical schools in the United States were just starting to resemble medical schools as we know them today. Through most of the 19th century, many medical schools had lower entrance requirements than those of a good high school. Once admitted, a medical school student was taught by lecture exclusively, and had only to sit through two four-month terms before being given, automatically, an M.D. degree. Few medical students ever touched a patient or had any clinical experience prior to graduation.

The founding of Cornell University Medical College coincided with a period of momentous change and strengthening of medical education in this country. Established and generously endowed through the gifts of Colonel Oliver H. Payne, Cornell University Medical College quickly became a national leader in medical instruction. One of Colonel Payne's requirements was that the Medical College be a university medical school. Admitting men and women from the outset, Cornell was also one of the country's first coeducational medical schools.

Cornell's original faculty, highly regarded as both scientists and teachers, recognized a broad liberal education as a prerequisite to a successful medical education.

Although Cornell University was founded and continues to flourish in Ithaca, New York, the University's Medical College was established in New York City to provide its students with opportunities for clinical learning and laboratory-oriented instruction that were rare of at the time. This clinical focus remains central to the Cornell experience.

As the scientific pursuit of medicine gained prominence, a new kind of institution arose — the partnership of university and hospital in an academic medical center. The Medical College and The New York Hospital first signed a limited affiliation agreement in 1913; formal affiliation in 1927 joined the facilities of the two institutions. Hospital and college were brought to one location in 1932 with the opening of The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, physically confirming the fundamental integration underpinning the academic medical center and its triple mission of education, research, and patient care.

Now at the heart of a world-renowned center of medical education, biomedical research, and health care, the Medical College remains committed to the advancement of medical knowledge through work done by faculty and students alike. As a pioneer in the early 1950's in developing the concept of comprehensive care for patients as well, Cornell investigated and refined the effective matching of patient needs with medical and community resources, through its Comprehensive Care and Teaching Program. While the formal program ended in the 1960's, the precepts of comprehensive patient care learned from the undertaking continue to be applied.

LOCATION

Located in New York City, Cornell University Medical College is based in one of the world's foremost centers of medicine and biomedical research. The College itself, situated along York Avenue on Manhattan's attractive upper east side, is part of one of the country's most prestigious biomedical research complexes. In addition to The New York Hospital, this complex includes two clinical affiliates: Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center and The Hospital for Special Surgery; private institutions established in contiguity to promote collaboration and integration of programs in the fields of education, research, and patient care.

In proximity to this complex is The Rockefeller University, a graduate university with an enrollment of 150 students, some of whom are candidates for both the M.D. and Ph.D. degrees, which are given in concert with Cornell University Medical College as part of the Tri-Institutional M.D.-Ph.D. Program. The neighboring institutions share resources, such as library privileges, lectures and concert series.

The Medical College research facilities, department offices, The Joan and Sanford I. Weill Education Center, and student housing are all within three blocks of one another, between 68th and 70th Streets. The campus also includes the William and Mildred Lasdon Biomedical Research Center, located between 68th and 69th Streets, and the C.V. Starr Biomedical Information Center, which combines the Samuel J. Wood Library with state-of-the-art computer and information resources.

FACILITIES FOR INSTRUCTION

Instruction in the basic medical sciences is conducted in a series of joined buildings, identified by the letters A through E, along York Avenue from Sixty-Eighth to Seventieth Streets. The entrance to the Medical College, at 1300 York Avenue, brings you to The Samuel J. Wood Library, the Uris Auditorium, and, on the second floor, the recently completed Joan and Sanford I. Weill Education Center.

LIBRARIES

The Cornell Medical Library is the principal information resource of the Medical College. Composed of the Samuel J. Wood Library and the C.V. Starr Biomedical Information Center, the library manages information that is used for the improvement of health care, the delivery of health professional education, and the conduct of biomedical research. Its mission is achieved by collecting, organizing and preserving information; providing education and consultation in access to and use of information; increasing the use of scholarly information resources by making them accessible at all points of need throughout the institution; conducting research; and developing information products and services.

Cornell Medical Library provides access to its services by means of computer workstations located throughout the Library, on the Medical Center network, and through the internet. The Library provides full access to information services through its web page, <<http://lib2.med.cornell.edu>>, which alerts users to new services and procedures, displays general information and news about the Library, provides access to the Library's online catalog, MEDLINE, and other databases, and connects the user to a variety of outside resources. The Library offers a full schedule of classes in information access and retrieval, database searching, and internet resources. The schedule can be found on the Library's web page.

The Library has ready access to the resources of New York City's major health sciences libraries, as well as other libraries throughout the country and the world. Any materials needed by Cornell students, staff or faculty may be requested through the Interlibrary Services Department.

The Library owns a selective collection of audiovisual materials. These materials and the appropriate equipment may be checked out for use in the Library. Macintosh computers and PCs are available throughout the Library. The software, accessible through the network, includes programs for word processing, creating spreadsheets, designing graphics, desktop publishing, bibliographic file management, database searching, and internet access. Laser printing, typing, and photocopying facilities are also provided. Rooms may be reserved for meetings, classes, conferences and viewing audiovisuals. Unreserved study rooms are located on the lower level for informal use by small groups.

The Medical Archives The Medical Archives of the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center occupies the entire 25th floor. The Archives collects, organizes, preserves, and makes available the official papers of the Medical Center and its antecedent institutions. The collection represents a continuous record of medical care and research since 1771. It includes personal papers, photographs, antique instruments, and apparatuses developed at the Medical Center. The resources of the Archives provide answers to administrative, legal, and fiscal questions, as well as general historical information about The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

JOAN AND SANFORD I. WEILL EDUCATION CENTER

The full benefit of the new curriculum is being achieved in The Joan and Sanford I. Weill Education Center, a new major learning complex occupying 20,000 square feet on the second floor of 1300 York Avenue.

This multi-purpose facility consists of a new auditorium and 21 modular teaching laboratories. Designed for maximum flexibility, it accommodates diverse teaching formats and methodologies, ranging from problem-based learning and lectures to practical laboratory instruction. The new facility permits the teaching of first and second year medical school classes simultaneously in the mornings, while graduate school courses take place in the afternoon. Outside of regularly scheduled classes, the entire facility becomes a study hall for both the medical and graduate schools. Access to the classrooms after 5:00 p.m. is by a magnetic card; the Center is open 24 hours per day.

Nine of the twenty-one classrooms are "wet laboratories" (rooms J through Q and W in the illustration) which are equipped with refrigerators, incubators and utilities to allow instruction with biological materials. The remaining twelve classrooms or "dry laboratories" (rooms A through E and R through T in the illustration) do not have the above utilities, but are otherwise of similar modular design. Integral to each classroom are workstations that permit the use of computer-assisted instruction in a variety of modalities (text, images, sounds, video, animations, simulations, bibliographic retrieval, access to databases, three-dimensional rendering, self-testing, etc.). The workstations consist of 116 networked Apple Macintosh 8500/180 computers, 8x CD-ROM drives, 2 GB hard disk drives, and 20" color monitors.

The central focus of the new facility is the Weill Auditorium with a seating capacity of up to 132. Its oval shape incorporates pre-existing building columns and features continuous desks, individual sound reinforcement and lighting, electrical outlets for laptop computers, and provisions for network access in the future. Rear-view projection onto a glass screen is provided by several means: visualizer/overhead, dual 35mm, and state-of-the-art high resolution video projectors.

Surrounding the Weill Auditorium there is a new student-faculty lounge called "The Archbold Commons." Designed as a place to allow students and faculty to gather in an informal setting, it features a snack bar and offers views of York Avenue through three expanded Gothic arched windows.

The Joan and Sanford I. Weill Education Center also houses the staff of the new Office of Curriculum and Educational Development whose mission is to support the faculty and students as they teach and learn in the new curriculum.

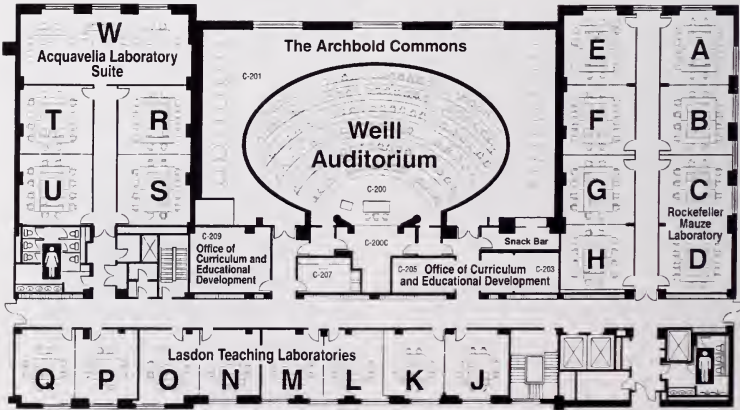

HOSPITAL AFFILIATIONS

In order to provide its students with a broad experience in patient care, Cornell University Medical College is affiliated with a number of teaching hospitals that provide primary, secondary, and tertiary care to the Greater New York community and residents of New York State. Many of the affiliated institutions are world-renowned leaders in their fields, and provide specialized care to patients from other states and countries.

The New York Hospital

Founded in 1771 under a charter granted by King George III of England, The New York Hospital was the first hospital in the city and the second in the country. Originally built downtown, the hospital has been located adjacent to the Medical College since 1932. A nonprofit, voluntary institution maintained by The Society of the New York Hospital, it has cared for more than five million patients since its founding. Three hospitals have merged with The New York Hospital in past decades: The Lying-In Hospital, the Manhattan Maternity and Dispensary, and the New York Nursery and Child's Hospital.

The New York Hospital was the first hospital in the United States to care for the mentally ill. Today, mental and emotional illnesses are treated at the Payne Whitney Psychiatric Clinic, an integral part of The New York Hospital complex, and the Westchester Division of The New York Hospital, in White Plains, New York.

Floor plan of the Joan and Sanford I. Weill Education Center.

Since 1927, the hospital has been integrated with Cornell University Medical College through the establishment of The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center. The agreement joined the facilities of the two institutions and provided for cooperation in the advancement of patient care, medical education, and scientific research.

There are 920 beds at The New York Hospital in Manhattan, and an additional 322 beds at its Westchester Division. Over 30,000 patients are admitted to the Hospital each year, and there are over 300,000 visits to its outpatient clinics and emergency department. Clinical instruction is given in 17 clinical departments that include many divisions or subspecialties. There are more than 47 residency and clinical fellowship training programs offered, with a total of 540 residency positions. The chief of each department is responsible for the care of the patients and the conduct of the professional services in the hospital, and is also the chairman of the corresponding department in the Medical College. Every clinical department is staffed by salaried faculty members, including the chief, who devote their full time to the service of the College and the Hospital. Other members of the faculty devote part of their time to private practices.

Hospital for Special Surgery

Hospital for Special Surgery (HSS), founded in 1863 by the New York Society for the Relief of the Ruptured and Crippled, was the first institution in the United States dedicated to the treatment of orthopedic conditions. Today it is a leader in the fields of orthopedics, rheumatology and sports medicine. Affiliation with The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center began in 1949. Construction of a new hospital building atop the FDR Drive was recently completed and all patients are now treated in the new facility. In addition, renovation is now underway to modernize the old facility.

The 160-bed hospital cares for more than 6,500 inpatients a year, and receives over 151,500 outpatient visits annually to HSS physicians and in more than 30 subspecialty clinics. It performs 25% of all joint replacement surgery in New York City. Thirty-two residents are trained in its four-year program in orthopedic surgery, while an additional 8 to 10 clinical fellows receive training in advanced programs in rheumatic diseases and orthopedic subspecialties. The hospital also maintains the School of Practical Nursing, an Osteoporosis Center, the International Center for Orthopedics and Rheumatology, and the country's only hospital-based computer-aided design and manufacturing facility for the custom design of artificial joints.

In addition to patient care and medical education, the hospital's research division investigates the causes and prevention of orthopedic and rheumatic diseases, and develops improved treatment of these diseases. HSS operates one of only 13 Multipurpose Arthritis Centers (MAC) in the country, and is a recipient of one of only two SCOR (Specialized Center of Research) grants for the study of lupus.

Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center

Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center is the world's oldest and largest privately operated center devoted to prevention, patient care, research, and education in cancer. The prototype of the National Cancer Institute - designated comprehensive cancer centers, Memorial Sloan-Kettering has two operating organizations: Memorial Hospital, which provides inpatient care, extensive outpatient services, a wide array of specialized and support services, and a broad program of clinical research; and the Sloan-Kettering Institute, with some 75 laboratories dedicated to biomedical investigation which are part of the Cornell University Graduate School of Medical Sciences.

Programs of basic and clinical research at Memorial Sloan-Kettering aim to advance the understanding of the nature and the fundamental causes of cancer, and to improve the means for prevention, diagnosis, and treatment. Research at the Sloan-Kettering Institute is organized into five major areas: Molecular Biology; Cell Biology; Cellular Biochemistry and Biophysics; Immunology; and Molecular Pharmacology and Therapeutics. Twenty-two clinical research programs are conducted under the auspices of Memorial Hospital. The close collaboration between the Center's scientists and clinicians facilitates the rapid translation of results from the laboratory to the patient's bedside.

Memorial Sloan-Kettering is developing techniques to identify and monitor people at increased risk for cancer, providing tests to diagnose the disease in its earliest stages, and leading studies to assess promising avenues of cancer prevention. An innovative outpatient facility, Memorial Sloan-Kettering 64th Street, opened in 1992 and is situated apart from the main campus, yet nearby. It provides the latest high-technology diagnostic services for all types of cancers and medical and non-medical needs of breast-cancer patients.

The Prostate Diagnostic Center, located at the Memorial Sloan-Kettering 65th Street outpatient facility, opened in 1993; it offers comprehensive prostate diagnostic services, and treatment planning and care for prostate cancer. It also provides men at high risk of this disease with prevention strategies and surveillance.

In 1996, Memorial Sloan-Kettering acquired The Stella & Charles Guttman Breast Diagnostic Institute, located at 55 Fifth Avenue and 13th Street, in the Greenwich Village neighborhood of Manhattan. For nearly three decades, The Guttman Institute has provided high-quality breast-cancer screening. The Memorial Sloan-Kettering Guttman Diagnostic Center is continuing this tradition of care by offering prevention and early detection of breast, gynecological, prostate, and colon cancers. The Memorial Sloan-Kettering Counseling Center, which opened in 1996 at 1246 Second Avenue and 65th Street, is an outpatient facility to help cancer patients of all ages cope emotionally with their disease and treatment and later to adjust to life after cancer.

Memorial Sloan-Kettering's International Center opened in July 1997, at 1429 First Avenue and 74th Street. This facility is part of the Center's International Oncology Program, developed to help meet the special needs of some 1,000 patients who travel to Memorial Sloan-Kettering from around the world each year. Another important component of the program is telemedicine - the transmission of medical images via computer that enables physicians in other countries to consult with Memorial Sloan-Kettering. To facilitate international collaboration, Memorial Sloan-Kettering has established oncology programs in alliance with hospitals in Switzerland, Greece, and Brazil. Memorial Sloan-Kettering has also joined forces with hospitals in Westchester, Long Island, and New Jersey to provide people in these communities with access to the Center's world renowned cancer care closer to home.

Originally established in 1884, Memorial Hospital has been affiliated with Cornell University Medical College since 1914. Many staff members of Memorial Hospital and Sloan-Kettering Institute hold faculty appointments either in the Medical College or in the Graduate School of Medical Sciences, which offers doctoral degree programs through the Sloan-Kettering Division. The Center is a major resource for the Medical College, offering students clinical instruction and research opportunities. Center facilities provide unparalleled instruction in the pathology, diagnosis, and treatment of neoplastic disease.

The Winifred Masterson Burke Rehabilitation Hospital

The Winifred Masterson Burke Rehabilitation Hospital, founded in 1915 by John Masterson Burke as a tribute to the memory of his mother, has been affiliated with The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center since 1968. Situated on a picturesque 60 acre campus in White Plains, the hospital is a leader in the field of physical rehabilitation.

With its 150 inpatient beds and a large outpatient service, Burke offers a multidisciplinary, team approach to rehabilitation, providing diagnostic, evaluative and treatment services to those in need of rehabilitative care. The hospital treats patients from around the country, although the majority are transferred directly from acute care facilities in the tri-state area. The primary objective is to help the patient achieve an optimal level of functioning following a disabling illness or injury and to return the patient to the community to live as independently as possible.

Burke's comprehensive program includes services of physicians trained in rehabilitation, neurology, cardiology, rheumatology, pulmonary disease, internal medicine and psychiatry, as well as neuropsychologists, physical, occupational, speech therapeutic recreation and respiratory therapists, social workers and rehabilitation nurses. The staff is involved in clinical research, teaching and clinical activities in the hospital and basic research in the affiliated Medical Research Institute. Fellowships are offered in neurerehabilitation. Housing is available on the campus.

The Winifred Masterson Burke Medical Research Institute

The Research Institute supports research conducted at Burke, including the Dementia Research Laboratories and the Laboratory of Molecular Neurobiology. In addition, the Institute conducts research into pulmonary disease, head injury and other neurological disorders.

Basic research in these areas is central to the specific problems of chronic illness and disability which confronts the majority of Burke patients, and with which rehabilitation is concerned. Clinical research programs are conducted under the auspices of individual departments of the Burke Rehabilitation Hospital.

The Research Institute is staffed by world-renowned scientists and has received numerous honors and awards of international acclaim. In addition to presenting their findings at major conferences, researchers publish their work in numerous journals. The institute is intimately involved with the hospital, offering students the opportunity to combine clinical care with research.

The New York Hospital Medical Center of Queens

The New York Hospital Medical Center of Queens is a 457-bed acute care institution providing primary and tertiary care to an urban population which reflects the remarkable ethnic and cultural heterogeneity of New York. It is a major trauma center, with the largest dialysis unit on the East Coast and one of the nation's most advanced radiotherapy services. The Hospital sponsors the 315-bed Silvercrest Extended Care Facility for the care of the chronically ill.

The Hospital has a 20-year tradition of training medical students and residents in all the major clinical services. There are currently 155 residents and fellows who receive training. Research programs are being conducted in the fields of infectious diseases, oncology and nephrology. The Hospital, originally named Booth Memorial Hospital, opened in 1957 as a 210-bed hospital. It rapidly expanded to meet the needs of the community and became a teaching center with affiliations to major university medical centers.

In December, 1992, sponsorship was assumed by The New York Hospital. The name was changed to The New York Hospital Medical Center of Queens.

New York Methodist Hospital

New York Methodist Hospital, an acute care teaching facility which has been located in Brooklyn's Park Slope community since 1881, houses 602 inpatient beds (including bassinets) and provides services to over 24,000 in-patients each year. An additional 300,000 out-patient visits and services are logged annually.

The hospital offers nine medical residencies and fellowships in hematology, oncology, geriatrics, and pulmonary medicine, and participates in integrated fellowships in Cardiology and Gastroenterology. It also offers on-site allied health training programs in medical technology, radiologic technology, and radiation therapy technology.

New York Methodist Hospital maintains dedicated ventilator, rehabilitation, medical oncology, psychiatry, and critical care in-patient units. The hospital's specialized clinical services include a cardiac catheterization unit, cardiopulmonary physiology lab, rehabilitation therapy unit, sleep-wake disorders center, vascular laboratory, reproductive endocrinology laboratory, diagnostic imaging, a spine and arthritis center, and a breast imaging center. It is also the center of a regional radiation oncology network which includes seven institutions.

Three satellite Family Health Centers, one serving the Park Slope and downtown Brooklyn neighborhoods, another serving the Borough Park, Bensonhurst, Flatbush and Mapleton communities, and a third one serving the Greenpoint community, provide adults and children with a wide range of primary care services. The hospital also provides community outreach services to senior citizen centers, schools and other institutions in the neighborhoods of Brooklyn.

New York Methodist Hospital has been a member of the New York Hospital Care Network since 1993.

Cayuga Medical Center at Ithaca

Situated in the Finger Lakes region of Central New York, Cayuga Medical Center at Ithaca is an acute-care facility that provides high-quality health care, emergency, inpatient and outpatient, to a community of 150,000 people. Flushing Hospital Medical Center (FHMC) was established in 1884 and is the oldest voluntary hospital in Queens. It has approximately 250 acute beds, with a 20-bed designated geriatric unit, a 22-bed intensive care unit, a 30-bed chemical dependency unit. Although 75% of its 19,625 admissions consisted of patients over 65, it also has an active obstetrical and pediatrics unit, with over 3,000 deliveries each year. FHMC serves Flushing, Bayside, Forest Hills and Jamaica communities, which are ethnically very diverse. FHMC is a recent affiliate of Cornell and participates in the first year Medicine, Patients and Society course, second year Physical Diagnosis teaching and a component of the third year pediatrics clerkship.

Wyckoff Heights Medical Center

Wyckoff Heights Medical Center (WHMC) was founded, at the end of the nineteenth century, as the German Hospital of Brooklyn. It is a 408-bed voluntary hospital located in northern Brooklyn just on the border of Queens serving the Williamsburg, Bedford Stuyvesant, Woodside and Jackson Heights communities. Last year, the institution provided approximately 142,000 outpatient visits through its ambulatory care and school health networks. 19,980 inpatients were discharged and there were 62,000 emergency room visits. WHMC has the only family medicine residency training program in the Cornell affiliated institutions. This program has its own ambulatory training site at the LaMarca Health Center. WHMC is a recent Cornell affiliate and will be involved in the first year Medicine, Patients and Society course.

The community serviced by Lincoln is primarily Hispanic (53%) and African American (43%). Lincoln is a new affiliate of Cornell and will be involved in the first year Medicine, Patients and Society course and fourth year electives during this first year of affiliation.

ADMISSIONS

REQUIREMENTS

The Committee on Admissions of Cornell University Medical College seeks students capable of becoming future leaders in the field of medicine. Applicants must be thoroughly prepared in the sciences and well versed in the liberal arts. Science and non-science majors are equally considered.

Although most applicants will have completed four years of college, possession of an undergraduate degree is not a requirement of candidates for the degree of Doctor of Medicine from Cornell University. Candidates exhibiting exceptional educational and personal initiative and development may be seriously considered for early admission to the study of medicine at Cornell.

For admission, Cornell University Medical College requires satisfactory completion of at least 24 semester credit hours in science courses including: biology or zoology, general chemistry, organic chemistry, and physics. In addition, six semester credit hours are required in English literature or composition. Candidates must realize that a thorough basic training in scientific concepts and methods can only be acquired through rigorous laboratory experience; at least two terms of biological science beyond the introductory level, for instance, are recommended for non-science majors.

Applicants, however, must not overlook the educational value of study in the humanities and social sciences. In all cases, candidates planning premedical work should pursue subjects that provide a broad foundation for medical study rather than attempt to anticipate courses required in the medical curriculum.

As part of the selection process, the Committee on Admissions evaluates an applicant's current mastery of the contemporary subject matter relevant to beginning a medical education and, hence, prefers that the applicant satisfy the preceding requirements with recent course work and MCAT scores obtained within the past five years. Any questions concerning suitability of course work or MCAT scores taken previously should be directed to the Office of Admissions, (212) 746-1067.

APPLICATION

Application to Cornell University Medical College must be made through the American Medical College Application Service (AMCAS), Lobby 26, 2501 M. Street, N.W.; Washington, DC 20037-1300. AMCAS is the sole distributor of application forms and instructions, which can be obtained upon request. You may also request AMCAS materials at its web site (<http://www.aamc.org>).

After Cornell receives the AMCAS application, additional information will be requested and instructions will be given about the submission of letters of evaluation. Evaluation by a premedical advisory committee is preferred. If this is not available, the applicant may substitute two letters of evaluation from members of the undergraduate science faculty who are well acquainted with the student.

A $75 application fee must accompany the supplementary application form. The fee may be waived for financial reasons for those applicants eligible for waivers of the AMCAS fee.

When the Admissions Committee receives the requested supplementary information, letters of evaluation, and the application fee, it will carefully review the completed application and select students for personal interviews. Students invited for personal interviews will be those, among the large number of applicants, who will be most seriously considered for acceptance.

The Committee will notify applicants of its decision after March 1. Applicants who are accepted will have two weeks following receipt of their letter of acceptance to secure a position in the class by responding in the affirmative. By May 15, accepted applicants must send a $100 deposit to continue to hold a position in the class. The deposit is deductible from the first tuition payment; it may be refunded if the student withdraws from the class before June 1.

SELECTION

From an applicant pool of over 7,000, the Admissions Committee selects a class of one hundred and one students. Given such numbers, the Medical College clearly receives applications from many more candidates meeting the basic qualifications for the study of medicine than it can possibly accept. In addition to objective criteria, therefore, evaluation of applicants also involves subjective judgments including an assessment of student motivation, maturity, personal qualities, and other factors deemed by the faculty to be essential for the education of an effective and competent physician. To be seriously considered for admission, candidates must complete the required course work and demonstrate superior academic accomplishment at the undergraduate level. They also must be of good moral character and possess the requisite sensory, cognitive, motor, and organizational skills - including the ability to synthesize and apply knowledge - which are necessary to master the entire curriculum of the Medical College.

Cornell attempts to maintain a heterogeneous student body by selecting well-qualified students from diverse economic, geographic, academic, and racial backgrounds. The number of students accepted from any one college, region, race, or sex thus may vary from year to year. Well-motivated students from particularly adverse economic or social backgrounds who have had substandard educational opportunities are seriously considered.

Applicants who are unsuccessful in gaining acceptance to Cornell University Medical College are rarely successful on reapplication unless there has been a substantial improvement in their qualifications. Prior year application materials are carried over for consideration during reapplication.

University policy actively supports equality of educational and employment opportunity. No person shall be denied admission to any educational program or activity on the basis of any legally prohibited discrimination involving, but not limited to, race, color, creed, religion, national or ethnic origin, sex, sexual orientation, age, or handicap. Cornell is committed to the maintenance of affirmative action programs which will assure the continuation of such equality of opportunity.

Fulfillment of the specific legal requirements is no substitute for, and does not detract from, the basic principle of freedom of opportunity and action which has characterized Cornell University since its founding. Association with Cornell, either as a student or staff member, involves participation in a free community where all persons are recognized and rewarded on the basis of individual performance rather than any personal convictions, appearance, preferences (including sexual or affectional orientation), or happenstance of birth.

All policies regarding admission, employment, and educational programs and activities are established and administered in conformity with the Education Practices Act of New York, as well as state and federal civil rights laws, specifically including Title IX of the Education Amendments Act of 1972, and regulations thereunder, prohibiting practices or policies in admissions, education programs or employment that are in any way discriminatory on the basis of sex.

EARLY DECISION PROGRAM

The early decision program (EDP) provides an excellent opportunity for admission to those exceptionally well qualified applicants who are interested in attending Cornell University Medical College. Applications are accepted until August 1 and are processed through the American Medical College Application Service (AMCAS). All EDP applicants will be notified of their EDP status by October 1.

Dr. Richard D. Granstein, The George W. Hambrick, Jr. Professor and Chair, Department of Dermatology, delivering the main address at Opening Exercises.

Accepted candidates are not eligible to apply to any other medical school and must enroll at Cornell the following September. Candidates not accepted will be deferred for consideration with the regular pool of applicants and notified of their final admissions decision in March. However, these applicants are eligible to apply to other medical schools in the interim.

ADVANCED STANDING

When vacancies occur in the second or third-year classes, students may be admitted with advanced standing. Only those students who are currently enrolled and in good standing and have completed and passed examinations in the equivalent basic science course work as full time matriculated medical students in LCME accredited medical schools are eligible for consideration for transfer to Cornell University Medical College. In addition, to be considered for transfer, applicants must demonstrate compelling circumstances as one of the reasons for their request for consideration, in accordance with the guidelines issued by the Association of American Medical Colleges.

Applicants must submit the formal application for admission with advanced standing as well as official transcripts of all prior academic work. Applicants must also submit two letters of evaluation from their medical school basic science faculty, as well as a letter from the Dean of Academic and/or Student Affairs stating that the student is in good academic standing. These candidates must furthermore have fulfilled the requirements for admission to the first-year class at Cornell University Medical College. They may be required to take examinations in any medical school course taken in another school. Applications and additional information may be obtained in early March of the year for which admission is sought. Applicants should apply to the Office of Admissions, 445 East 69th Street, New York, New York, 10021. Those who are accepted must send a $100 deposit, which is deductible from the first tuition payment.

THE TRAVELERS SUMMER RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP PROGRAM FOR PREMEDICAL MINORITY STUDENTS

A summer fellowship program for minority students at the Medical College aims specifically to add to the number of minority students currently in medical schools and, in general, to increase awareness among minorities of the great variety of medical career opportunities. Promising premedical students who have completed their junior year spend seven weeks as summer fellows at the Medical College.

Fellows work four days a week at a variety of research activities with faculty sponsors from different departments. The students in this program are often involved jointly with medical students who hold similar fellowships. Students take a specially designed lecture series in cardiovascular physiology and participate in a series of seminars about community health problems. Minority physicians from the faculty discuss the practical aspects of a range of medical specialties, and advanced year medical students take summer fellows on evening rounds in The New York Hospital.

Information regarding fellowship application and all other aspects of minority admissions can be obtained by writing to Bruce L. Ballard, M.D., Associate Dean, Cornell University Medical College. Application should be made after the first semester of the junior year, and not later than March 1.

TUITION AND FEES

All fees for instruction and other charges are paid at the Student Accounting Office of the Medical College, Olin Hall, Room 230.

A single student budget for 1997-98 is $39,200. It includes: tuition $25,000, fees $745, Olin Hall rent $3,550, food and personal $8,000, books, microscope and equipment $1,925. Health insurance may be waived with proof of comparable coverage. A multiple year tuition prepayment plan has been approved by the Medical College. Information is available to prospective students.

After being notified of their acceptance, admitted students are given a limited time (usually two weeks) to decide if they will enroll in the entering class. A longer period may be granted if students are waiting for financial aid information before making their decision. A student's place in the class is maintained after May 15 only if a $100 acceptance deposit is paid. The deposit is credited toward the tuition charge; it may be returned if the student withdraws from the class before June 1.

Any individual who owes money to the University will not be allowed to register or re-register in the University, receive a transcript of his or her record, have his or her academic credits certified, be granted a leave of absence, apply for or retain student housing, or have a degree certified.

Refund Policy

If a student terminates his or her Medical College registration by official leave of absence or withdrawal, tuition will be charged from the first day of the quarter in progress to the effective date of the leave of absence or withdrawal as recorded in the Office of Academic Affairs. No tuition for the quarter will be charged, however, if the effective date of the withdrawal or leave of absence is within the first six days of the quarter.

If the date of withdrawal for leave of absence is effective after the first six days of the quarter, tuition and fees for that quarter will be retained in the following amount: 15 percent for a week or fraction of a week following the first six days; 30 percent for the second following week; 50 percent for the third following week; 75 percent for the fourth following week; fifth following week, 100 percent. Financial aid refunds are prorated in the same way if a student terminates registration.

STUDENT FINANCIAL AID

Financial aid is awarded only on the basis of demonstrated need, as determined by analysis of income and assets of students and their families. All students accepted to Cornell are considered to have exceptional merit; there are no special merit scholarships. To qualify for financial aid, students must provide information about parents' finances. No students are considered "independent". Needs analysis for financial aid is undertaken by federal and private services used by most graduate and professional schools. A married student is expected to provide information on the spouse's income and assets. Changing circumstances are taken into account in each year's review, including other children in college, and parents' ages, retirement needs, and health.

To be eligible for financial assistance at Cornell University Medical College, a student must be in good academic standing and making satisfactory progress according to the Guidelines for Promotion and Graduation of the Medical College, printed annually in the Student Handbook.

A student financial aid package includes student and family contributions. A "unit loan" must be taken before grants are awarded. In 1997-98 the unit loans range from $17,000 for the first year class to $20,000 for the fourth year class. Any remaining deficit is met with a grant. Students who obtain outside scholarships will have their unit loans reduced.

Financial Aid Counseling

Cornell's Office of Student Financial Aid provides comprehensive financial information to applicants as well as individual counseling throughout the student's education, including advice on budgeting and debt management. The office seeks ways to ease the financial burden on students by providing information on outside grants and loans; and summer, part-time, and spouse's employment.

Foreign Students

Students who are not citizens or permanent residents of the United States are not eligible for Medical College financial aid, institutional grants or loans. Any non-US citizen or permanent resident who is accepted for admission will be expected to comply with one of the requirements listed below on or before July 1 of the year of matriculation. The United States Student Visa (I-20) will not be processed until one of these financial requirements are satisfied. Details of the requirements and applicable agreements are available in the Office of Admissions and will be sent in letters of acceptance. In all cases, the student is responsible for any and all fees and other expenses.

1. The accepted student must deposit in an escrow account (to be established under terms acceptable to the Medical College) funds sufficient to meet tuition charges for the total period of enrollment. At this time, the amount is $100,000.
2. The accepted student must pre-pay their four years of tuition. The Medical College has prepared a formal document which outlines the cost and terms. Essentially, this agreement states that students may prepay four years of tuition by multiplying the tuition cost at the time of matriculation by four.

EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS AND POLICIES

The Medical College is divided into twenty academic departments. Seven departments are concerned primarily with the sciences underlying clinical medicine: the Departments of Biochemistry, Cell Biology and Anatomy, Microbiology, Pathology, Pharmacology, Physiology and Biophysics, and Public Health. The other thirteen departments focus upon the study, treatment, and prevention of human diseases, and maternity care: the Departments of Anesthesiology, Cardiothoracic Surgery, Dermatology, Medicine, Neurology and Neuroscience, Obstetrics and Gynecology, Ophthalmology, Otorhinolaryngology, Pediatrics, Psychiatry, Radiology, Surgery, and Urology.

The Executive Faculty Council and General Faculty Council share the responsibility for all policies at the Medical College. Executive Faculty Council members are chairmen of the academic departments and administrative officers. Elected faculty representatives from all Medical College departments comprise the General Faculty Council. Each of the four classes of medical students elects representatives to the Medical Student Executive Council, which serves as a forum for student opinion and for communication between faculty and students. The Medical Student Executive Council appoints student members to the Faculty Councils.

CURRICULUM OVERVIEW

The required period of study at Cornell University Medical College extends over four academic years. A thesis is not required for graduation, but a student's independent work may produce results worthy of publication and qualify the student for the degree of Doctor of Medicine with Honors in Research. Students are urged to devote time to a single subject in which they have a special interest. Great technical proficiency in all of the various fields of clinical medicine is not expected during the regular medical course, but must await further education after graduation.

With the continual goal of maintaining and furthering the high standards of the academic programs at Cornell, the faculty reserves the right to make changes in the curriculum at any time. In fact, the Medical College has revised its medical curriculum as part of a widespread reassessment in the field of medicine that has begun to reshape medical education for the first time in 60 years. Key features of the new curriculum include: integration of the teaching of the basic and clinical sciences; introduction of problem based learning; reorganization of the core basic science curriculum into highly integrated block courses; teaching the basic and clinical sciences across the four years of medical school; gradual acquisition of clinical skills in the first two years; a three-year, integrated sequence in public health, behavioral sciences and psycho-social medicine; a new primary care clerkship; and increased flexibility in the scheduling of clerkships and clinical electives. One of the major objectives of the educational program is an emphasis on self-education by students who now spend less time in formal classroom instruction and more time learning in small groups or individually through independent study. Problem-solving and critical thinking skills are emphasized, imparting to students the resources by which they may, on their own, absorb and evaluate the ever-increasing amount of new scientific knowledge, both during their years of post-doctoral training and in practice.

However intensive a period of study medical school may be, only a small part of the medical knowledge, skills and attitudes needed for a successful career in medicine can be acquired in four years as a medical student. Prospective physicians further devote at least one year, and usually many more years, to graduate medical education in preparation for the practice of medicine - as an intern or resident in a hospital, either in clinical or laboratory work or both.

Implementation of the new curriculum began in August, 1996 with the first year, and will continue, one year at a time, until all four years are fully implemented during 1999-2000.

First-Year Curriculum

The first year of study consists of four core basic science courses and Medicine, Patients, and Society. The core basic science courses are taught sequentially as integrated block courses on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays; they are described below in the order in which they are offered. Medicine, Patients, and Society I is taught every Thursday throughout the academic year (see Class Schedules, pages 37-38).

Molecules to Cells (12 weeks, August through November): This course is devoted to the study of Biochemistry, Molecular Biology, Biochemical Genetics, Cell Biology, Cell Physiology, and Introduction to Molecular Pharmacology. Course Director: David P. Hajjar, Ph.D.

Genes and Development (4 weeks, November and December): This course teaches the genetic basis of diseases, Embryology, and Developmental Biology. Course Co-Directors: Donald A. Fischman, M.D. and William K. Holloman, Ph.D.

Human Structure and Function (14 weeks, January through April): This course is dedicated to the study of Gross Anatomy, Histology, Physiology of organ systems, and clinical imaging of the normal human body. These disciplines are integrated and applied to the study of the following organ systems: skin and musculo-skeletal, cardiovascular, respiratory, liver, biliary and gastrointestinal, kidney, urinary tract and endocrine and reproductive. Course Director: Thomas Maack, M.D.

Host Defenses (7 Weeks, April through June): This course introduces the student to the basic concepts of abnormal human biology and is devoted to the study of General Pathology, Immunology, and the principles of Microbiology and Pharmacology. Course Director: Kendall A. Smith, M.D.

Medicine, Patients and Society I (Thursdays, August through May): This course approaches the patient-physician relationship from the conceptual and practical perspectives. It teaches the development of a professional identity in the student; the basics of the medical history and physical examination; and connections between patients and their illnesses. The course brings together the following content areas in ways that highlight their interrelationships and connections: medical interviewing, physical and mental status examinations, human behavior in illness, medical ethics, patients in their contexts, public health, risk factor assessment and intervention, biostatistics and clinical epidemiology. On Thursday mornings, students attend introductory lectures, followed by small group seminars. Afternoons are spent at physicians' offices located at The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center and other areas of Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, Westchester, and Long Island. Each student is assigned to one physician, a Cornell faculty member who, as office preceptor, oversees the student's interactions with patients, relatives, and the office staff. Course Director: Carol L. Storey-Johnson, M.D.

Second-Year Curriculum

The second year of study consist of two core basic science courses, Medicine, Patients, and Society II, and an Introductory Clerkship. The core basic science courses are taught sequentially as integrated block courses on Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, and Fridays from late August to late March; they are described below in the order in which they are offered. Medicine, Patients, and Society II is taught every Tuesday during the same period (see Class Schedules, page 39). The Introductory Clerkship is offered just prior to the beginning of the third year clinical courses.

Brain and Mind (12 weeks, August through November):

This is an integrated course that ranges from basic neuroscience and gross anatomy of the head and neck, to neurological diagnosis and psychopathology. In addition to faculty from the Department of Physiology, the course draws on teaching efforts of the Departments of Cell Biology and Anatomy, Neurology and Neuroscience, Pathology, Pharmacology, Psychiatry and Radiology. The course synthesizes basic science and clinical aspects of the brain and mind, utilizing a range of teaching techniques, with an emphasis on active student participation. In addition to attending lectures, laboratory sessions and conferences, the students engage in problem-based analysis of classical neurological and psychiatric disorders, and have the opportunity to examine individual patients in a clinical setting. The emphasis is on both the acquisition of fundamental knowledge and the development of diagnostic skills. Acquaintance with contemporary research ideas and techniques is fostered by journal club sessions that review papers from the current literature. The course is offered at the beginning of the second year. Course Co-Directors: John J. Caronna, M.D. and Bernice Grafstein, M.D.

Medicine, Patients and Society II (Tuesdays, August through March):

This course builds upon the principles introduced in Medicine, Patients and Society I. It teaches some of the skills of doctoring including establishing the doctor-patient relationship, taking the medical history and conducting the physical examination. In addition, this course brings together and integrates a number of important content areas including domestic violence, substance abuse, sexuality, death and dying, health systems and public health. On Tuesday mornings, students attend lectures and panel discussions followed by small group seminars. Beginning in November, one afternoon a week is spent at physicians' offices located at The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Medical students at work in one of the high-tech teaching laboratories in the Weill Education Center.

Center and other areas of Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens, and Westchester. As with Medicine, Patients and Society I, each student is assigned to one physician, a Cornell faculty member who, as office preceptor, oversees the student's interactions with patients, relatives and the office staff. One additional afternoon a week is spent in formal training in the techniques of performing the physical examination. These sessions are in-patient oriented and take place at The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center and its network affiliates. Course Director: Susan L. Deutsch, M.D.

Basis of Disease (17 weeks, November through March):

This course introduces the basic concepts of human diseases from the perspective of five different disciplines: Pathophysiology, Pathology, Radiology, Pharmacology, and Microbiology/Infectious Diseases and is arranged sequentially by organ systems (with the exception of the central and peripheral nervous systems). The course consists of the three parts described below.

Part 1 of Basis of Disease covers four clinical disciplines over a six-week period. These include dermatology, rheumatology, hematology/oncology and infectious diseases. The faculty is drawn from the Departments of Medicine, Microbiology, Pediatrics, Pathology, Pharmacology, and Radiology. The course focuses on disease states related to the specific clinical discipline, and utilizes standard lecture, workshop, laboratory and problem-based learning approaches to education.

The goal is to teach the student how to approach a specific problem relating to the clinical discipline. Acquaintance with contemporary research ideas and analytic techniques is enhanced by journal club sessions. Computer-based images and written information are essential components.

Part 2 of Basis of Disease comprises the study of diseases of the cardiovascular, respiratory, and renal systems. Among the topics addressed are some of the most frequently encountered diseases affecting Western society, including atherosclerosis, hypertension, ischemic heart disease, obstructive and restrictive lung disease, lung cancer, and acute and chronic renal failure. PBL tutorials are supplemented by small group sessions to discuss patient-related problem sets. Students view gross and microscopic pathology first-hand in small group sessions, some of which focus on radiologic-pathologic correlations. Journal club articles are disease-oriented and focus on basic issues of pathogenesis and experimental study design.

Part 3 of Basis of Disease explores the pathophysiologic basis of disease in several different areas. Gastrointestinal and hepatobiliary disorders are followed by the study of diseases of the endocrine system, of reproductive health, and an evaluation of factors in men's and women's health. Pediatrics and clinical genetics follow and an introduction to geriatrics and disorders of the elderly brings the course to a close.

The faculty is drawn from the various clinical departments and divisions within the Department of Medicine as well as representatives from the Departments of Pathology, Pharmacology, Pediatrics, Microbiology and Radiology. The course synthesizes basic science and clinical aspects of the organ systems that are studied, utilizing a range of teaching techniques, with an emphasis on active student participation. In addition to attending lectures, laboratory sessions and conferences, the students engage in problem-based learning activities. The emphasis is on both the acquisition of fundamental knowledge and the development of diagnostic and problem-solving skills. Acquaintance with contemporary research ideas and techniques is fostered by journal club sessions that review papers from the current literature. Computer-based instructional materials are integrated into a variety of these activities.

Third-Year Curriculum

The third-year curriculum begins with Introduction to the Clinical Years and Radiology offered in the month of July. These courses are followed by 48 weeks of clerkships lasting from two to twelve weeks each in all the major clinical fields, including medicine, neurology, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, psychiatry, and surgery, as well as public health. Students completing this clinical core curriculum are sufficiently acquainted with the various clinical specialties to identify their primary areas of interest, both in the clinical and basic science fields. Accordingly, they are prepared to plan an educational program for their final year in medical school that is best suited to their interests.

In the spring of the third year, each student chooses a senior faculty member as an advisor to help in planning the fourth-year program.

Fourth-Year Curriculum

During the fourth year, students correlate their preceding medical school experiences and begin to function effectively in the physician's role while sharpening their clinical skills in preparation for residency training. Students are required to complete fourteen weeks of and a minimum of eighteen weeks of electives in the fourth year. Mandatory selective areas include one month of ambulatory care medicine or pediatrics, a one-month subinternship in either general medicine or pediatrics, one month of basic science teaching or research in basic science or clinical medicine, and a two week anesthesiology-critical care clerkship.

REQUIRED AND ELECTIVE COURSES

Courses are arranged in sequence and duration to develop logically the knowledge and training of Cornell medical students. For a detailed description of these courses see the section, Academic Departments and Course Offerings.

The Fourth Year Course Catalog contains a listing of all fourth year courses offered through Cornell University Medical College at The New York Hospital, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, Hospital for Special Surgery, New York Hospital Medical Center of Queens, New York Methodist Hospital, Cayuga Medical Center of Ithaca, New York Community Hospital, United Hospital Medical Center, St. Barnabas Hospital, Flushing Hospital Medical Center, Wyckoff Heights Medical Center, and Lincoln Medical and Mental Health Center. The Medical College is pleased to accept qualified students of medicine for fourth year electives from all medical schools fully accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education. Visiting students may participate in up to eight weeks of electives at Cornell. Independently designed study in the Medical College or electives in other educational institutions may be arranged with the approval of the student's advisor and the Office of Academic Affairs.

The various Medical College departments also offer courses and opportunities for special study to students in the Medical College, to candidates for advanced degrees in the Graduate School of Medical Sciences, and to qualified students of medicine from schools accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education.

INTERDISCIPLINARY COURSE

The following interdisciplinary courses must be taken by students in the MD-PhD program and is optional for other medical students.

Frontiers in Biomedical Science

Offered in both the first and second year, these courses focus on current topics in biomedical research. They run for 25-30 sessions, starting in late August. These courses are required of all MD-PhD students and open to all MD and PhD students who are willing to participate actively. Students who are considering applying to the MD-PhD Program should take these courses. The courses are structured journal clubs, which are led by faculty from Cornell University Medical College, The Rockefeller University, and the Sloan-Kettering Institute. The faculty presenter selects one or two original research articles for critical discussion, and perhaps, a review article for background reading.

Frontiers in Biomedical Science I (for first year students) This course is comprised of the following topic blocks: structural biology; molecular genetics; protein synthesis, targeting, and transport; signal transduction; molecular biophysics; and sensory transduction.

Frontiers in Biomedical Science II (for second year students) This course is comprised of the following topic blocks: receptor pharmacology; neurobiology; control of cell growth; cancer; immunology; and metabolism.

EDUCATIONAL POLICIES

Advancement and Graduation

Qualifications

The evaluation of students for advancement from year to year involves objective criteria and subjective judgments similar to those employed in the admission process. To be considered for advancement, individuals must have satisfactorily completed all required medical college course work for that year and must demonstrate motivation, maturity, reliability, sound judgment, a sense of responsibility, and good moral character and other personal qualities. In addition to proper sensory perception and appropriate cognitive, motor, and organizational skills, students must display the ability to synthesize and apply knowledge, and possess other attributes deemed essential by the faculty to the making of a competent and effective physician.

The Medical College curriculum is divided into four successive academic years of four quarters each. At the end of each academic quarter, a student's performance in all required and elective courses is evaluated and recorded. The final grade in a course is determined by the appropriate department after evaluation of student performance in all aspects of the course work, including examinations. At the conclusion of each academic quarter, a student's overall performance, based on the results of evaluations in all of the courses in the curriculum of that year, is reviewed by a faculty Committee on Promotion and Graduation.

The purpose of the Guidelines for Promotion and Graduation is to detail as clearly as possible the procedures to be followed if a student demonstrates poor performance in courses or clerkships.

Dismissal

Students may be dismissed for the following reasons: (1) failure to pass required course work or to remedy failures as described in the Guidelines for Promotion and Graduation, (2) violation of the Code of Professional Conduct, which outlines the principles of academic integrity expected of every Cornell medical student; (3) a determination by the faculty, after an opportunity for the student to be heard, of failure to meet the standards of fitness for medicine set forth in the section on qualifications for advancement and graduation. In addition, any violation of the Drug and Alcohol Policy of the Medical College will be reviewed to determine fitness for medicine as explained in the Student Handbook.

Graduation

The award of the degree of Doctor of Medicine attests to the individual's successful completion of the curriculum and qualification to practice the profession effectively and skillfully. The faculty does not believe that the degree can or should be awarded subject to any restrictions or modifications, and reserves the right to withhold the granting of a degree to any person whose ability to practice medicine safely and effectively is impaired. Graduation from Cornell University Medical College fulfills one of the requirements necessary to apply for a license as a physician in the various states. Most Cornell graduates, however, pursue further training.

Candidates for the degree of Doctor of Medicine must be at least 21 years old and be of good moral character. They must have completed successfully four full courses of at least eight months each as regular matriculated medical students. All required work of the medical curriculum must be completed and all prescribed examinations passed. Every candidate for a degree must pay, or satisfactorily arrange to pay, all accounts due to the University at least ten days before Commencement.

The Family Education Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 as amended prohibits the release of educational records by institutions without the specific consent of the student or graduate.

Any student or graduate may request that an official transcript of his or her Medical College record be mailed to accredited hospitals and to educational or other recognized institutions as credentials in support of an application for a position or promotion. All official transcripts are embossed with the Cornell seal and carry the instruction that they are not to be turned over to a third party. This rule exists to avoid possible loss and fraudulent use of an official document of the Medical College.

Students or alumni may send their requests to the Registrar, Office of Academic Affairs, Room C-118, Cornell University Medical College, 1300 York Avenue, New York, NY, 10021.

Medical Licensing

Graduates of Cornell University Medical College are admitted unconditionally to the examination for license to practice medicine in the United States. Certified students and graduates of Cornell University Medical College are admitted to the three steps of the United States Medical Licensing Examination which replaced the Federal Licensing Examination (FLEX) and the NBME Parts I, II, and III, as the single, uniform examination for licenses in the United States. For information, write to the USMLE Secretariat, 3930 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104.

CODE OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Absolute integrity is expected of every Cornell medical student in all academic and clinical activities; he/she must in no way misrepresent his/her work, fraudulently or unfairly advance his/her academic status, or be a party to another student's breach of academic integrity.

The maintenance of an atmosphere of academic honor and the fulfillment of the provisions of this Code are the responsibilities of the students and faculty of Cornell University Medical College. Therefore, all students and faculty members shall refrain from any action that would violate the basic principles of this Code, in spirit or letter.

VISITING AND AUDITING STUDENTS

Visiting students are candidates for the M.D. degree at other LCME-accredited medical schools who have been selected and approved to take fourth-year elective courses offered by Cornell University Medical College. Application to any elective course is made through the Office of Academic Affairs. A letter of recommendation from the Academic Dean of the parent medical school and a Student Health Form must accompany the student's application. A visiting student may participate in no more than eight weeks of elective coursework during any academic year. The student's parent school must provide adequate professional liability insurance to cover the student's activities while in attendance to Cornell University Medical College. Cornell will not charge tuition.

Auditing students are individuals who attend lecture courses at the discretion and with the permission of the department chairman. No courses offered by clinical departments may be audited. Records will not be maintained. Students who audit courses will receive no credit, and may not take final examinations.

SPECIAL PROGRAMS

Tri-Institutional M.D.-Ph.D. Program

This program offers a small number of highly qualified college graduates the opportunity to study both clinical and biomedical disciplines leading to the M.D. and Ph.D. degrees. The combination of basic research skills and clinical experience prepares students in the program for teaching and investigative careers. Preclinical and clinical training are provided by the faculty of Cornell University Medical College. Research opportunities are offered in the laboratories of the Cornell University Graduate School of Medical Sciences, The Rockefeller University, and the Sloan-Kettering Institute.

The Tri-Institutional M.D.-Ph.D. Program offers an intensive and intellectually challenging six to seven-year course of study. Participants spend the first two years as medical students mastering the preclinical sciences and attending research-oriented seminars led by experts in the biomedical fields. The summer months are spent in the laboratory learning experimental techniques and doing research. The students spend three to four years as full-time graduate students, mainly doing laboratory research and writing the thesis. Research training is offered in the following areas: biochemistry, biophysics, cell biology, genetics, immunology, molecular biology, neurosciences, pharmacology, physiology, and virology. The last year consists of required clerkships in medicine, surgery, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, neurology, psychiatry, radiology, public health, and anesthesiology. This plan satisfies the minimum residency requirements for both the M.D. and Ph.D. degrees.

A successful applicant will demonstrate excellent undergraduate science preparation and a strong commitment to combining an investigative career in the biomedical sciences with clinical medicine. Applicants must satisfy the requirements of each institution. All students accepted to the M.D.-Ph.D. Program receive full-tuition scholarships and stipends to cover living expenses for the entire period.

A summer internship program, "Gateways to the Laboratory," gives college students from underrepresented minority groups, who have completed their freshman or sophomore years with distinction, an opportunity to acquire one or two summers of experience in a leading laboratory. The goal is to let students who have outstanding potential in the biomedical sciences test and develop their interest in pursuing a combined degree program, while providing the hands-on experience that ranks so high among the criteria for admission to M.D.-Ph.D. programs. Students join laboratories at any one of the three institutions for a ten-week period. The program includes seminars, rounds, journal clubs and discussions of career opportunities. Housing is available, and students receive a stipend of $3,600.

Dr. Olaf Andersen, Director of the Tri-Institutional M.D.-Ph.D. program, meeting with first year students.

For additional information, including application procedures, contact: Tri-Institutional M.D.-Ph.D. Program, 1300 York Avenue, Room D-115, New York, NY 10021 (212)746-6023. E-mail: mdphd@mail.med.cornell.edu.

Research Opportunities

A number of research opportunities are available for students to engage in investigative work in the basic or clinical sciences while matriculated at the Medical College. Time commitment to research may vary from that of elective periods undertaken during the academic year, to summer vacations, to full time involvement in research during an academic leave of absence. Medical students granted an academic leave of absence to perform full time research must pay a matriculation fee to maintain enrollment status and remain eligible for Medical College housing, the Student Health Plan and loan deferment. Funds are available for summer research and students may apply for medical research fellowships in order to support a year off to perform investigative work. Prizes are awarded each spring for research submitted to the Student Research Committee.

M.D. with Honors in Research

The goal of the M.D. with Honors in Research Program is to encourage and recognize achievements in biomedical research by medical students of Cornell University Medical College other than those in the M.D.-Ph.D. program. In order to obtain the degree, the student must successfully complete a laboratory or clinical research project, at Cornell or one of its affiliated medical centers, supervised by a member of the Cornell faculty who is actively involved in research. Research projects may be undertaken at other research institutions with prior approval. All projects must be approved by the Student Research Committee, as well as the faculty supervisor. Research work may be done at any time during the student's tenure in the Medical College. Time commitment to the project may vary from summer work and electives to a year of full time research.

Awarding of the degree of M.D. with Honors in Research will be based upon the quality of the research project submitted by the student. The student should complete a body of work which will comprise a scientific paper of a quality suitable for publication in a major scientific journal. The research report, endorsed by the faculty sponsor, will be submitted to the Chairman of the Student Research Committee by April 1st of the year of the expected degree. The paper, with the student as sole or senior author, is reviewed by two referees, experts in the area of research, and formally defended at a presentation to the Student Research Committee.

Research in Molecular Medicine

A training program in Molecular Medicine was established at the Medical College to allow students after their second or third years to gain experience in laboratory science that is oriented toward clinical application. The primary purpose of this program is to train a new generation of physician-scientists who will have an understanding of and employ the techniques of modern molecular and cellular biology to address questions of relevance to clinical medicine. This program offers financial support to a small group of highly qualified and motivated students for a one-year period of full-time training in laboratory investigation. The training will be under the preceptorship of a member of a selected group of clinical faculty who are actively engaged in laboratory research. After the initial year of research training, the student will be allowed to choose either to conclude investigative training or to apply for entry into a new track of the M.D.-Ph.D. Program at the Cornell University Graduate School of Medical Sciences. If the choice is to conclude the research training, the student will complete the requirement by writing a thesis that will be submitted for consideration for awarding of the degree of M.D. with Honors in Research upon graduation. If selected to join the M.D.-Ph.D. Program, the student will complete all of the requirements for the two degrees and perform thesis research in the laboratory of the previously chosen preceptor. A successful candidate will have demonstrated excellent accomplishment in the first two years at the Medical College and during the research training year, and a commitment to a career in biomedical research. Upon acceptance into the M.D.-Ph.D. Program, students will receive full-tuition scholarships and stipends for living expenses.

Cornell Scholars

A career development program funded by the income from an anonymous gift, the Cornell Scholars program is designed to attract unusually promising young investigators to the Medical College. Eligible candidates must hold M.D. or Ph.D. degrees and qualify for the rank of Assistant Professor. Successful candidates receive research awards in the amount of $200,000, payable over a three-year period. Nominations for the award originate with the chairman of the department offering the appointment, and selection is based on recommendations made after review by external advisors.

The following faculty have received these awards: 1984; Francis Barany, Ph.D. (Microbiology), Daniel

Center for Vascular Biology

Recently established at the Medical College, the Center for Vascular Biology is an interdisciplinary research and training unit dedicated to the study of cardiovascular disease. Its 22-member scientific staff is drawn from the basic and clinical departments. Faculty from the departments of Biochemistry, Pathology, Medicine, Cardiothoracic Surgery, Cell Biology, Pharmacology, and Pediatrics who have expertise in biochemistry, cell and molecular biology, genetics, and structural biology work within a 6,000 sq. ft. research area to define the etiology and pathogenesis of arteriosclerosis and thrombosis. Although the scientific focus of the center is at the basic science level, it draws on the professional expertise of clinicians and surgeons to bring the research efforts from the laboratory bench to the bedside.

The Center's program utilizes a didactic and investigative approach to the understanding of disease processes. For this purpose, state-of-the-art techniques in molecular biology and biochemical genetics are used to train and educate pre- and post-doctoral students and emphasize the use of gene therapy and gene transfer techniques to correct the molecular deficiencies in blood vessels, and prevent heart and coronary disease.

Directed by David P. Hajjar, Ph.D., Professor of Biochemistry and Pathology, the Center is funded by Cornell's NIH Program Project on Vascular Cell Signalling, NIH SCOR Program in Molecule Medicine and Atherosclerosis, NIH R-01 grants, and an NIH training grant in Vascular Biochemistry and Atherosclerosis for graduate and medical students and post-doctoral fellows.

Second Year

The Department of Anesthesiology participates in the teaching of Pharmacology. Anesthetic agents are considered, not only as depressants of the central nervous system, but also as illustrations of the general pharmacological phenomena of uptake and distribution kinetics. The pharmacology of neuromuscular blocking drugs and of anticholinesterase medications is also presented. The department also assists in teaching about drugs that affect respiratory, cardiovascular and autonomic mechanisms, in lectures, laboratory demonstrations, and student seminars.

Fourth Year

Anesthesiology Clerkship In the two week clerkship, mornings are spent in the operating room participating in administration of clinical anesthesia with an attending anesthesiologist. Afternoon didactic lecture series cover basic anesthetic principles in a case discussion format. In addition, medical students are encouraged to attend the Monday morning Grand Rounds Series of presentations.

ELECTIVE COURSES

Fourth Year

An elective clinical or research program is offered by the department to fourth-year students. Each student is assigned to an attending anesthesiologist. Students spend their time making preoperative visits, administering anesthesia and participating in the care of patients in the post-anesthesia care unit. Emphasis is placed on respiratory physiology, therapy, and resuscitation. Progressive participation and responsibility are given to the student. Students also participate in all resident conferences and lectures. A separate clinical elective is offered in the treatment of pain by the use of nerve block techniques, transcutaneous stimulation and injection of trigger points for the treatment of myofascial pain. Students are also exposed to acute postoperative pain techniques.

Research Opportunities

Students are encouraged to participate in ongoing research projects in the Department of Anesthesiology. Active research includes the pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics of nondepolarizing neuromuscular blocking agents, neuropharmacology of anesthetic agents, effect of anesthetics on ion channels and mechanisms of ischemia. Students receive hands on experience in the laboratory, while learning basic research principles. Interested students may contact H.C. Required CoursesFirst Year

The department's faculty participate in the Gross Anatomy component of the Human Structure and Function Course. See description under Curriculum Overview.

Department faculty (Dr. Todd Rosengart) participates in the Molecules to Cells course serving as tutor three times a week for new problem based learning sessions during which the students are introduced to basic science concepts in a clinical context.

Second Year

Medicine, Patients and Society II (Physical Diagnosis) and Basis of Disease (Pathophysiology). Several introductory lectures on the basic principles of cardiac and thoracic surgery as related to the pathology and physiology of the heart, mediastinal and thoracic structures are given as part of these courses.

Third Year

Surgery Clerkship Students enrolled in this clerkship during the third year are required to attend a series of didactic presentations given by the department's

Students may elect to spend up to four weeks in the Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery participating in clinical activities within the operating room, on the patient floors, and in the Intensive Care Unit, as well as participating in the didactic conferences. Students will gather experience by taking complete histories and doing physical examinations as well as evaluating laboratory determinations on patients in the perioperative setting. When the patients are operated upon, the student acts as an important part of the operating team and participates first-hand evaluating pathological conditions as well as learning basic techniques of surgery. Exposure to the cardiac anesthesia armamentarium as well as to the concepts of cardiopulmonary bypass is also stressed.

Multiple formal clinical conferences occur each week which include the adult and pediatric cardiothoracic surgical planning conference, the weekly morbidity and mortality conference and the thoracic oncology conference. Multidisciplinary conferences including the electrophysiology conferences and a monthly series of didactic lectures covering basic concepts in cardiothoracic surgery are also offered. Formal rounds with the senior attending surgeons as well as daily rounds with the senior fellows stress student participation.

Elective Courses

Fourth Year

In the fourth year the Department of Cardiothoracic Surgery offers a variety of electives including experience in adult as well as congenital cardiac surgery. Opportunities in the departmental research laboratories as well as the potential for rotation in other research and clinical centers are made available. Educational Goals

The study of medicine reasonably begins with the study of the normal structure of the human body, for the first question usually asked in any analysis of a biological system is: what are its spatial relations, its forms, its configuration, and the time courses of development of these spatial relations? This is the substance, and this is the unique aspect of biological systems that constitute the anatomical sciences.

The objective is to bring this unique aspect of the human organism into focus for the first-year medical student and to present the major structural concepts and principles. The presentation aims toward some appreciation of how these concepts have evolved, how these principles have been established, and what the outstanding questions are. The student is provided with first-hand experience in some of the methods of structural analysis at submicroscopic levels and is encouraged to understand the principles and major limitations of most of the modern methods of cell biology and anatomy. Foregoing a comprehensive, but necessarily superficial, study of human structure, an analysis is offered of representative structures, aiming to develop in the student confidence and competence for further independent study of anatomy in the years ahead. However powerful and indispensable current anatomical concepts are in the analysis of medical problems, they will eventually be replaced in the minds of the best physicians by much more powerful concepts.

A major emphasis of this department is the focus of research at cellular and subcellular levels of organization, for it is apparent that modern therapeutics will ultimately be based on a comprehensive knowledge of cellular functions. Thus, several elective courses are available which probe gene expression, details of subcellular structure and function, and developmental biology.

Required Courses

Molecules to Cells: Course Director, David P. Hajjar, Ph.D. (Departments of Pathology and Biochemistry); Associate Director, Joel Pardee, Ph.D. (Department of Cell Biology and Anatomy). This course is an integration of biochemistry, cell biology, molecular biology, cellular physiology and biophysics and the fundamentals of pharmacology. Its staff is drawn from many departments in the Medical College - both basic and clinical sciences - and runs for a total of 12 weeks in the fall of the first year. As with all other basic science courses in the first year, the Molecules to Cells course includes an integration of problem based learning tutorials, formal lectures, journal clubs, small group discussions and laboratories.

Genes and Development: Course Co-Directors, Donald A. Fischman, M.D. (Department of Cell Biology and Anatomy) and William K. Holloman, Ph.D. (Department of Microbiology). This course is an integration of human genetics, developmental biology and human embryology. Its staff is drawn from basic and clinical science departments of the medical college and the genetics faculty of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center. Problem based learning tutorials are integrated with lectures, journal clubs, small group sessions and laboratories.

Human Structure and Function: Course Director, Thomas Maack, M.D. (Department of Physiology and Biophysics); Associate Directors, John Weber, D.D.S. (Department of Cell Biology and Anatomy) and Domenick Falcone, Ph.D. (Departments of Pathology and Cell Biology and Anatomy). This course is an integration of physiology, gross anatomy, microscopic anatomy, and medical imaging of the normal human body. Its staff is drawn from basic and clinical science departments of the Medical College. Laboratories, lectures, journal clubs and small group sessions are linked closely to problem based learning modules.

Elective Courses

Developmental Biology: Principles of descriptive, experimental, and molecular developmental biology will be presented, using several animal systems as examples. Early development of the whole organism, and of cells, tissues and organs will be considered. Emphasis will be on systems of active investigative interest and will have a balance between lectures and small group discussions based around recent research publications. First and second quarters, 1998-1999. Offered in alternate years. Drs. Lacy, Lisswander and Mikawa.

Topics in Molecular Genetics: The class will focus on key topics of molecular biology concerning gene structure and organization in prokaryotes and eukaryotes, chromosome structure, DNA replication, protein synthesis and translational and transcriptional control. The use of genetic, biochemical, and molecular biological methods to study the questions experimentally will be covered in depth. The course will include an equal number of lectures and group discussions of representative research papers. Prerequisite: background in biological sciences. Limited to 30 students. First and second quarters. Drs. Barany, Brennwald, Dorsett, Lacy, Osley, Patashne.

Research in Cell Biology and Anatomy: Opportunities for laboratory research are available for one or more quarters under the tutelage of faculty members in the department. Projects are available in cell motility and the cytoskeleton, membrane biology, genetics, vision research, viral replication, oncogenesis, developmental biology, neuroscience, second message signaling, and inflammation. Interested students should contact Dr. Fischman for further information.

Educational Goals

The goal of the program is to transmit knowledge and experience of the importance, diagnosis, prevention and therapy of skin disorders to students. The program offers an in-depth involvement for those with an interest beyond the minimum. The content includes a specialized morphological vocabulary, basic pathophysiology, cutaneous medicine diagnostic skills, dermatopathology, surgery and therapeutics.

The Department has responsibility for patient services, teaching of undergraduate and graduate students, and a research program. The New York Hospital, Rockefeller University Hospital, Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, Lincoln Hospital, and the Catholic Medical Center provide the clinical facilities. Patients in ambulatory and in-patient settings are served. Research concerning inflammatory dermatoses, genetic disorders, the immunology of the skin, tumors and therapeutics is carried out at The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, The Rockefeller University, and Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

Required Courses

Second Year

Basis of Disease One week of in-depth review of cutaneous disease. Includes problem-based learning (PBL) modules, four lectures on basic physiology of the skin and the pathophysiology of important inflammatory and malignant skin diseases, laboratory sessions on recognition of the spectrum of diseases and microscope tutorials on histologic and infectious findings, as well as discussions about the importance of the psychosocial context.

Elective Courses

Fourth Year An in-depth clerkship in clinical dermatology is offered as well as electives in basic and clinical investigative dermatology. A complete list of electives may be found in the Fourth Year Course Catalog.

Educational Goals

The program for the Department of Medicine is based on a number of cardinal premises: 1) There is a minimal core of information, skills and understanding that must be assimilated regardless of the student's choice of career. 2) The essence of medicine is continuous and independent inquiry, which should be fostered in all students through investigative work at the clinical and laboratory levels. 3) The scope and limitations of medicine are best revealed through the demands and responsibilities of patient care. 4) The need and privilege to provide sympathetic understanding and support to the patient and the patient's family are prerequisite to being a good physician.

A large number of options are open to those pursuing a career in medicine, a diversity that includes patient care, research and teaching. This diversity enables most students to select an area of medicine that satisfies their individual interests, abilities and needs. There is no preconceived image of an ideal graduate except that he or she be competent and content in the career choice, and be well prepared to adapt to myriad changes that will occur in the practice of medicine in the future. The program provides the student with certain fundamental concepts and skills that will allow thoughtful exploration and evaluation of career possibilities. The growth and complexity of medical knowledge is proceeding at a remarkable pace. The very complexities — medical, legal, ethical, economic — involved in making medical decisions preclude using set formulas or reliance on memorization. A more useful and rewarding approach depends on the development of problem-solving strategies. The ability to analyze problems systematically is as pertinent to clinical medicine as it is to research. Determining what information is needed to resolve the patient's problems is essential if one is to avoid the pitfalls that stem from an unselective reliance on technology. The goal is to enable the student to examine and question the decisions made on his/her patients — an ability which is the basis for all learning. The depth to which each student pursues a patient's problem will vary from the study of the physical and emotional factors responsible for the illness in a single patient to an investigation of the disorder at a fundamental level. Clearly this spirit of inquiry is essential to all areas of medicine. The program of the department is designed to provide the challenges and opportunities to develop this quality.

It is hoped that through their experience, students will blend habit with critical analysis, scientific thought with empathy, and competence with humility.

Required Courses

First Year

Medicine, Patients, and Society I: Medicine, Patients, and Society I is a longitudinal interdisciplinary course which has as its main goal the provision of early clinical experiences for students to facilitate the development of a professional identity and to begin the acquisition of clinical skills. The course is held every Thursday throughout the academic year. Seminar sessions are held in the mornings and an office preceptor experience occurs in the afternoon.

The seminar sessions cover a wide range of topics including Patient-Physician Communication, Patient-Centered Interviewing Techniques, Coping with Illness, Medical Ethics, Life Cycle (Pediatric through Geriatrics) Issues, and Introduction to Physical Examination, Physician-Centered Interviewing, Clinical Epidemiology, Biostatistics, and Health Prevention. The seminars are conducted in an interdisciplinary fashion to demonstrate the interconnections between various topical areas. The seminar process encourages collegial participation skills and critical analysis of a variety of content areas. The faculty for the seminar sessions comes from many different departments within the Medical College attesting to the generic importance of the subjects covered.

The office preceptorship experience places one student with one doctor in his or her office. The student works with patients selected by the office preceptor. The faculty for the office preceptorship experience is drawn from New York Hospital-based and network-based physicians so that students will have the opportunity to see different styles of office practice. The exercises conducted by the student in the doctor's office are structured to apply concepts learned in the seminar sessions to real world situations and experiences. Students have the opportunity to see patients and to obtain first hand information about the experience of being a patient in our health care system. Each office preceptor session includes the opportunity to discuss relevant issues of patient care seen that day. Students enter into an educational partnership with the office preceptor and negotiate their contribution to the partnership on an individual basis. Memorable experiences from the office preceptorship are shared with other student colleagues during the next seminar session to illustrate the richness and diversity of clinical medicine.

The course provides formative evaluation of the students' performance as well as summative evaluation. Periodic feedback on the development of professional skills is given. The evaluation process also provides opportunities for self-assessment to identify strengths as well as weaknesses and strategies are developed to allow students to strengthen any identified weaknesses.

Second Year

Medicine, Patients, and Society II (Advanced Physical Diagnosis) The course is an intensive introduction to the basic bedside clinical skills, i.e., the taking of a medical history and the performance of a physical examination, with emphasis on the anatomic and physiologic principles underlying the important symptoms and signs encountered in clinical medicine. Lectures and demonstrations, supplemented by extensive use of audiovisual and electronic aids, form the didactic basis of the course; special attention is directed to the medical interview and the approach to the sick. Students are assigned in small groups to clinical tutors with whom they refine their bedside skills in twice-weekly examination of inpatients under close tutorial supervision. Patient examinations are carried out at the Cornell affiliated hospitals: The New York Hospital, Memorial Hospital, Winifred Masterson Burke Rehabilitation Hospital, The New York Hospital-Queens Medical Center, New York Methodist Hospital, St. Barnabas Hospital, Community Hospital of Brooklyn and Lincoln Medical and Mental Health Center.

Basis of Disease: The course is the most important bridge between the basic and clinical sciences and teaches the mechanisms of disease processes, a thorough understanding of which is critical to the evolution of a medical student into a clinician. The goals of this course are to provide students with a fund of knowledge in human pathophysiology and pathology, and instruction in the application of this knowledge to clinical disease states, thus preparing them for the third year clinical clerkships. Information is presented on an organ system basis, both by lectures and case studies. This is an interdisciplinary course in which the Department of Medicine plays a major role.

Third Year

Introduction to the Clinical Years: This course is designed to prepare the student for the clinical clerkships. There are three major topics. In the section on Clinical Process, students use problem-based patient cases in small workshops to develop clinical thinking, from the problem list to differential diagnosis, diagnostic testing, and diagnosis. The Clinical Skills section includes instruction in EKG interpretation, antibiotics, and basic clinical procedures (venipuncture, intravenous catheter placement, etc.). All students are certified in basic cardiac life support. A section of Special Topics deals with hospital organization, writing orders and notes, infection control, and geriatrics.

Medicine Clerkship: Each student is assigned to the medical service of The New York Hospital and one of the Cornell affiliated hospitals for a period of twelve weeks, four weeks of which is in the ambulatory area. The objectives of the clerkship are: 1) to refine and strengthen the skills of history taking and physical examination; 2) to develop the processes required to analyze the patient's symptoms and signs and to propose differential diagnoses; and 3) to appreciate the uses and limitations of laboratory tests and procedures. The student is an integral member of the medical team that is responsible for the care of patients. The student obtains the patient's history, performs the physical examination and basic laboratory tests, and records the findings. The student's results and analysis of the clinical problems are reviewed and discussed with the house staff and in small student groups under the supervision of a tutor. The student actively participates in the continued care of the patient, in part to verify or alter his or her initial evaluation, but also to develop an appreciation of the unique relationship that exists between patient and physician. These activities are supplemented by: 1) seminars that emphasize the approach to urgent and/or commonly encountered medical problems; 2) weekly meetings with the chairman, individual division chiefs, or course director, for educational purposes and as a means of becoming acquainted with the senior faculty.

Fourth Year

Sub-Internship In Medicine Selective: The purpose of the sub-internship is to develop further the broad range of skills required of a physician by assuming responsibility for the care of patients in a secure and supportive environment. A premise is that learning the scientific and humanistic bases of medical practice is best accomplished by the challenge of caring for patients in a supportive setting allowing sufficient time for thought. The sub-intern will have the opportunity to integrate all levels of the care for his or her patients including medical decision making, strategies for testing, management of emergencies, communication with patient and family, and the technical and administrative aspects of good patient care.

Two students are assigned to share an intern slot of a house staff team at The New York Hospital or other Cornell affiliated hospitals. On average, each sub-intern cares for 4-6 patients at any one time under the supervision of the Junior Assistant Resident assigned to the floor and the patient's private attending physician. The student participates in all house staff activities including work rounds, attending rounds, x-ray rounds, Professor's rounds, and weekly conferences in the Department of Medicine. This rotation extends up until the Monday morning of the following module except during December.

Ambulatory Care Selective: The objectives are to: 1) obtain a more balanced view of internal medicine by participating in ambulatory patient care; 2) develop a systematic approach to problem solving and decision making through a review and critical examination of: a) the basic skills of history taking and physical examination; b) the reasoning and processes employed in diagnosis; c) the selection, analysis and limitations of laboratory tests and procedures; d) the factors and processes employed in making clinical decisions; e) the use of cost-effectiveness and its effect on medical practice; 3) develop the principles and strategies used in the pharmacological management of patients; 4) develop methods to efficiently obtain information and data from the literature; and 5) develop an approach and methods to critically analyze and assess medical literature. The course format includes patient care experience in The Cornell Internal Medicine Associates Practice or North Shore University Hospital. There are seminars and didactic sessions tailored to the students' interests that address the ways clinicians plan diagnostic and therapeutic strategies. Students will perform a library research project which will be presented at the end of the selective and which will demonstrate skill acquisition in the critical assessment of medical literature. Attendance at all sessions is mandatory to complete the course.

Elective Courses

Over fifty electives are offered. The comprehensive program includes clinical opportunities for in-patient and ambulatory care and opportunities for participation in clinical research. Each year the elective list is revised and can be found in the Fourth Year Course Catalog.

Research Opportunities

Members of the faculty of the Department of Medicine are involved in a large number of laboratory-based research projects. These projects range from basic investigation in the areas of molecular and cellular biology, to studies of the pathogenesis of cardiovascular and infectious diseases, to studies of novel approaches to disease therapies including gene therapy. Many of these projects have direct clinical applicability. Students may join a research group of a member of our faculty during summer recesses and/or take a year for intensive research training after their second or third years. In many instances, these research training periods can be supported by intramural or extramural fellowships. At the conclusion of the traineeship, students are encouraged to write a "thesis" describing their research to be submitted for graduation with the degree "M.D. with Honors in Research."

The Department of Medicine has developed a new Program (Medical Student-Medical House Staff-Medical Scientist Program - MS³) to allow students to begin training for a career in biomedical research during their last year at CUMC. Students will receive scholarship assistance for the fourth year at CUMC when they will participate in research in a laboratory of a designated member of the Department of Medicine faculty. After completion of medical school, trainees in this program will continue through three years of house staff training in Internal Medicine and two years of subspecialty training at the New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center as part of a Clinical Investigator Pathway approved by the American Board of Internal Medicine. The participants will begin a two to three-year period of intensive laboratory research training after the second year of post-graduate medical training. Trainees in the Program will be eligible for board certification in Internal Medicine and will be prepared to begin a career in biomedical research.

Educational Goals

The department has two major responsibilities in the Medical College: teaching and research. The faculty supervises the care of patients with neurological diseases at The New York Hospital, Memorial Hospital, The Hospital for Special Surgery, and Burke Rehabilitation Center. This rich clinical exposure and the rewards of providing care to patients from many geographic and social backgrounds are shared by students and residents. The research laboratories and programs of the department are located within the Medical College and the several hospitals. These laboratories conduct both fundamental and clinical research, seeking the basic answers to neurologic diseases and new ways to improve the treatment of patients. A large proportion of the research faculty also are engaged in the Neuroscience Program of Cornell University Graduate School of Medical Sciences.

Two goals guide the formal teaching program for medical students. One is to learn diagnosis and treatment by applying a thorough knowledge of the physiology and biochemistry of the major neurological diseases. The other is to transmit an understanding of the brain as an adaptive organ regulating man's internal milieu and outward behavior. Formal clinical teaching begins in the second year and continues thereafter.

Required Courses

Second Year

Brain and Mind: This is an integrated course that ranges from basic neuroscience and gross anatomy of the head and neck, to neurological diagnosis and psychopathology. In addition to faculty from the Department of Neurology and Neuroscience, the course draws on teaching efforts of the Departments of Cell Biology and Anatomy, Pathology, Pharmacology, Physiology, Psychiatry and Radiology. The course synthesizes basic science and clinical aspects of brain and mind, utilizing a range of teaching techniques, with emphasis on active student participation. In addition to attending lectures, laboratory sessions and conferences, the students engage in problem-based analysis of classical and neurological and psychiatric disorders, and have the opportunity to examine individual patients in a clinic setting. The stress is on both the acquisition of fundamental knowledge and the development of diagnostic skills. Acquaintance with contemporary research ideas and techniques is fostered by journal club sessions that review papers from the current literature.

Third Year

Neurology Clerkship: A one-month clinical clerkship is spent on the Neurology in-patient and out-patient service at The New York Hospital or Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center. Students perform the initial work-up of patients, attend rounds and conferences, and participate in the care of patients under the close supervision of resident housestaff and attendings. Students are also offered the opportunity to rotate on the Neurology Consult Service, on the out-patient sub-specialty clinic services, and in general neurology practices. Weekly written case reports and a short oral examination round out the student's evaluation and grading. Extensive reading is encouraged in order to develop a solid knowledge base about major neurological problems.

Required CoursesSecond Year

Instruction in ophthalmology begins as a part of the Physical Diagnosis component of the Medicine, Patients, and Society II course with practical demonstrations and a lecture in the use of the ophthalmoscope. Emphasis is placed on examination technique and features of the normal fundus. Basic neuro-ophthalmology is included.

Third Year

During the surgery clerkship, the class is divided into eight groups that participate in six weekly afternoons of presentation, discussion, and actual pathological case examinations. Each session concentrates on one phase of clinical ophthalmology. The entire series offers instruction in the most frequently encountered diseases of the eye.

Third-year students are also offered an elective rotation in ophthalmology as part of the surgery clerkship. Electives are available at The New York Hospital.

Elective CoursesFourth Year

Two fourth-year students per module can participate in the elective period. During their modules, they examine patients in the clinic and those hospitalized for surgery and review the cases with attending ophthalmologists. The student then observes the actual surgery and attends teaching rounds with the resident and attending staff who present interesting and problem cases for detailed review and discussion.

In addition, electives are available for students who have completed the third-year externship. These include the ophthalmic specialties such as oncology, vitreous-retina and neuro-ophthalmology. A research elective is also available.

Required Courses

Second Year

The students are introduced to otorhinolaryngology in two sessions, which are given as part of the Physical Diagnosis component of Medicine, Patients and Society II course.

Third Year

During their surgery clerkship, third year students are required to attend a series of didactic presentations given by the department's faculty on Otorhinolaryngology and Head and Neck.

Elective Courses

Third Year and Fourth Year

Third-year students are offered an elective rotation in otorhinolaryngology as part of the surgery clerkship. This clinical elective is offered in modules of two weeks. Clinical electives in Otorhinolaryngology are also offered in the fourth year but in modules of one month.

Full-time attendance is required. During the clerkship, the student's time is divided between duty on the ward, in the otorhinolaryngology outpatient clinic and in the operating room. The student also attends the weekly and monthly conferences.

Research Opportunities

The attending physicians are conducting research both in the clinical and basic sciences. Interested students may contact the department for a complete listing. Students at various stages of their medical training are allowed to participate depending on their academic schedules. Once the student is assigned a project by the attending investigator, they work very closely in collecting data and writing a scientific paper. When a paper is accepted for a local or national conference presentation, it is presented, often by the student.

Melissa G. Steiner, Ph.D. joined the Department of Otorhinolaryngology on July 1, 1995 to conduct research in Cell Biology, including collaboration with attendings and residents in areas pertinent to the department. Some of her research includes: Characterization of Novel Cells from Pheomorphic Adenomas of the Parotid Gland Established in a Collagen Gel System, Expression of the VLA/B1 Integrin Family in Pheomorphic Adenomas, Expression of VLA/B1 Integrins in Pheomorphic Adenoma Cell Lines, and Acoustic Neuromas. Her specialty is flow cytometry.

Facilities

The Department of Pathology occupies two floors of the central part of the college building, located above the Weill Education Center and library and in immediate contact with the hospital. Teaching is concentrated in the Education Center where small rooms for microscopy and small group teaching exercises are situated.

The postmortem services of The New York Hospital, Hospital for Special Surgery, Rockefeller Hospital, and the Westchester Division afford abundant opportunity for study of pathological anatomy and its relation to clinical medicine. The systematic records of autopsies at The New York Hospital have been preserved since 1851, and, in more recent years, protocols and microscopic slides have been carefully indexed and filed.

Required CoursesFirst Year

Pathology faculty participates in the teaching of the Host Defenses course. See Curriculum Overview for details.

Second Year

Pathology faculty participate extensively in the teaching of the Brain and Mind and Basis of Disease courses, which make up the the majority of the second year curriculum. See Curriculum Overview for details.

Elective Courses

Elective courses are offered at The New York Hospital, Hospital for Special Surgery, and Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center. The electives are described in detail in the Fourth Year Courses Catalog.

Required Courses

First Year

Pediatrics faculty participates in the teaching of the Medicine, Patients, and Society I course. See Curriculum Overview for description of the course.

Second Year

Basis of Disease Pediatrics faculty participates in the teaching of the modules on the specialty and clinical genetics.

Third Year

Pediatrics Clerkship The major undergraduate teaching effort of the Department of Pediatrics occurs in the third year. The pediatric clerkship is a six week course offered at three different sites: Flushing/NYH Queens Hospitals, Methodist Hospital and New York Hospital. Two to three weeks are spent in in-patient care, one week in the well baby nursery and two to three weeks in general pediatric and subspecialty outpatient clinics. Emergency room experience is gained by scheduled evening and weekend assignments to the units at each training site. All students meet at New York Hospital once each week during the clerkship for a core curriculum of lectures, case discussions and walk rounds.

Students are responsible for a history, physical examination, and formulation of a differential diagnosis. The diagnostic and therapeutic plan for the patient is developed by the student, and presented to the attending physician. Students are expected to follow their patients closely, and to write pertinent progress notes. Formal teaching seminars are scheduled highlighting various aspects of general pediatrics as well as its subspecialties. In addition, the student participates in daily attending rounds and case discussions. The regularly scheduled Grand Rounds and Professorial Rounds for the Department of Pediatrics are part of the curriculum for the third-year students.

Students are assigned in groups of four to a tutor who is a member of the faculty. In twice weekly meetings, the tutor reviews the students' write-ups and oral case presentations. These meetings are also frequently used to review specific points of diagnosis, treatment and pathophysiology through brief presentations made by students.

Elective Courses

Elective options are offered to fourth-year students. The department offers a one month fourth-year selective subinternship in Pediatrics that gives the student an opportunity to function as a subintern on a general pediatrics inpatient service. The student is expected to perform admission examinations, prepare a diagnostic and therapeutic plan, and to follow assigned patients on a daily basis. The student has the opportunity to attend all conferences and rounds with the housestaff team. A selective is also offered in ambulatory pediatrics. The student participates in evaluation and continuity clinics as well as the many specialty clinics. Students perform history and physical examinations on patients and present a diagnostic and therapeutic plan. The goal of this selective is to provide students with a supervised exposure to ambulatory pediatrics with special emphasis on preventative health care, normal physical and psychosocial development and out-of-hospital management of chronic disease. Supervision is by faculty of the Department of Pediatrics.

In addition to these selectives in general pediatrics, the department offers a wide variety of electives in both clinical and research pediatrics at The New York Hospital, Hospital for Special Surgery, Memorial Hospital, New York Methodist Hospital, New York Hospital Center of Queens, and the Family Health Center of Western Queens. Other elective courses are listed in the Fourth Year Course Catalog.

Required Courses

Pharmacology is taught over the first two years. A major aim of this course is to teach how selectivity of drug action is determined by pharmacologic principles. Emphasis is placed on the application of pharmacologic principles to the understanding and evaluation of drug actions. The goal is to provide the student with a scientific basis for a rational approach to drug therapy.

The fundamental principles of pharmacology are presented during the first year. Two sections of Pharmacology are presented in the first year curriculum in the Molecules to Cells and Host Defenses courses.

The qualitative and quantitative considerations of ligand-receptor interaction, activation of signal transduction and elicited response are taught in the Molecules to Cells course.

The general principles of drug absorption, distribution and elimination; pharmacokinetics; the concepts of dose-response-relationship and selective toxicity are taught in the Host Defenses course.

Medical pharmacology which covers major drug classes that are used clinically, is taught in the second year courses, Brain and Mind and Basis of Disease. Mechanisms of drug action and adverse side-effects will be discussed. Students will learn to develop a "way of thinking about drugs" based upon pharmacological principles to achieve optimal therapeutic benefits with minimal side effects.

Elective Courses

In the fourth-year elective periods, opportunities are available to pursue supervised laboratory course work and clinical studies in neuropharmacology, cardiovascular pharmacology, endocrine pharmacology, renal pharmacology, clinical pharmacology, drug dependency, analgesic pharmacology, drug metabolism, and cancer chemotherapy. Personalized independent study course in clinical pharmacology is offered to fourth year medical students in all modules of the year (see Fourth Year Course Catalog).

The Sterling Drug Award for Research in Pharmacology established in 1979 to honor Dr. Walter F. Riker, Jr., Chairman, 1956-'83, is to recognize research achievements by Cornell medical or graduate students, other than those in the MD-PhD program. The research project must be approved by the chairperson, as well as a faculty sponsor. The research may be done at appropriate times during the student's tenure in the Medical College. A report of the completed research is to be submitted to the Chairperson by April 1st of the termination year of research.

Required Courses

First Year

The Physiology faculty participate in the teaching of the Molecules to Cells, Human Structure and Function, Brain and Mind, and Basis of Disease courses. See Curriculum Overview for description of these courses.

The student is expected to meet a standard of knowledge in the indicated areas of physiology of sufficient depth to provide a basis for clinical teaching. After completion of these courses, the student is expected to have a sound grasp of the physiological basis of medicine and a professional understanding of the mechanisms involved in maintaining normal function of the human body.

Second Year

Brain and Mind. This is an integrated course that ranges from basic neuroscience and gross anatomy of the head and neck, to neurological diagnosis and psychopathology. In addition to faculty from the Department of Physiology, the course draws on teaching efforts of the Departments of Cell Biology and Anatomy, Neurology and Neuroscience, Pathology, Pharmacology, Psychiatry and Radiology. The course synthesizes basic science and clinical aspects of the brain and mind, utilizing a range of teaching techniques, with an emphasis on active student participation. In addition to attending lectures, laboratory sessions and conferences, the students engage in problem-based analysis of classical neurological and psychiatric disorders, and have the opportunity to examine individual patients in a clinical setting. The emphasis is on both the acquisition of fundamental knowledge and the development of diagnostic skills. Acquaintance with contemporary research ideas and techniques is fostered by journal club sessions that review papers from the current literature. The course is offered at the beginning of the second year.

Elective Courses

An opportunity is offered to students during their fourth-year elective periods to participate as laboratory instructors in physiology. Research work and journal clubs for medical students may be arranged in consultation with members of the department.

Required Courses

First Year

Psychiatry faculty participate in the Medicine, Patients, and Society I course. See Curriculum Overview for description of the course.

Second Year

Brain and Mind. This is an integrated course that ranges from basic neuroscience and gross anatomy of the head and neck, to neurological diagnosis and psychopathology. In addition to faculty from the Department of Psychiatry, the course draws on teaching efforts of the Departments of Cell Biology and Anatomy, Neurology and Neuroscience, Pathology, Pharmacology, Physiology and Radiology. The course synthesizes basic science and clinical aspects of brain and mind, utilizing a range of teaching techniques, with an emphasis on active student participation. In addition to attending lectures, laboratory sessions and conferences, the students engage in problem-based analysis of classical neurological and psychiatric disorders, and have the opportunity to examine individual patients in a clinic setting. The stress is on both the acquisition of fundamental knowledge and the development of diagnostic skills. Acquaintance with contemporary research ideas and techniques is fostered by journal club sessions that review papers from the current literature. The course is offered in the first quarter.

Third Year

Clinical Psychiatry Clerkship Students are assigned for six weeks to special teaching units either at the Payne Whitney Clinic, or the Westchester Division of The New York Hospital. Clerks actively participate in the evaluation and treatment of selected inpatients under the supervision of full-time faculty and residents.

Students also work with the families of inpatients and participate in all ward activities. Outpatient experiences with adults and children are also provided. Seminar series, tutorials, readings and videotapes of typical psychiatric syndromes supplement the direct clinical experiences.

Elective Courses

Fourth Year

Electives and subinternships in inpatient and outpatient psychiatry — both adult and child — offer extensive opportunities to learn diagnosis and treatment of psychiatric patients by actively participating in patient care under close supervision. Research electives are available in the many research laboratories and activities of the department including neurotransmitter biochemistry, clinical pharmacology, movement disorders, AIDS, and many others. Electives are also available in consultation-liaison, social and community psychiatry, psychotherapy, etc. Elective sites include Payne Whitney Clinic, Westchester Division, Memorial Hospital, and The New York Hospital. Details are available at the office of the Director of Medical Student Education and in the Fourth Year Course Catalog.

Research Opportunities

Department of Psychiatry faculty are conducting approximately 200 approved basic and clinical research projects, from receptor analyses of central actions of neuropeptide Y and peptide YY to a prospective study of post traumatic stress disorder in burn patients.

First and second year students are encouraged to become involved in the research activities of the department and to develop a project over the next three years. They may apply this work to candidacy for the degree of M.D. with Honors in Research. The Harold G. Wolff Research Prize for the most outstanding piece of original student research in the neurological or behavioral sciences has been awarded to students who have completed projects in the Department of Psychiatry.

Summer research fellowships are available. Projects have ranged from the study of neurophysiology of exploratory behavior in rats to studies of the families of dialysis patients. Interested students may contact faculty directly or discuss possible projects with the Director of Medical Student Education.

Fourth year research selectives are available in the many research laboratories and activities of the department including neurotransmitter biochemistry, infant development, clinical pharmacology, AIDS and others.

Students should contact the Director of Medical Student Education to discuss their interest and options.

Educational Goals

Public Health focuses on disease prevention, disease control, and health promotion in population groups. Society, rather than the individual, is the "patient". The area of study focuses not only on the biological markers of disease, but also on social factors that influence health status and constitute the contexts within which organized efforts can be made to promote health. The educational goals of the courses offered provide a framework to understand the changing community and its relationship to health and well-being. Since lifestyle patterns and health behavior play major roles in determining health status, attention is accorded to social and behavioral intervention methods. Although there is general agreement about the need to improve clinical decision making, there is controversy about the methods to be used to achieve this goal. The purpose of this course is to help the student understand the tools to make clinical decisions.

Modules in the Department of Public Health provide a framework to help the student understand the changing community and its relationship to health. The importance of a population-based perspective is underscored along with how socio-cultural factors can and do influence diseases and healing. Focus includes a strong emphasis on epidemiology and biostatistics; the development, implementation and evaluation of individual and community based interventions for promoting health and preventing disease; and health care policy issues. The objective is to equip students with basic concepts and methods that will promote their understanding of the causes and correlates of health as well as how health care is delivered and financed in the United States.

Required Courses

First and Second Year

The Public Health faculty participates in the Medicine, Patients, and Society I and II courses. The following aspects of Public Health are integrated into these courses:

Biostatistics and Epidemiology The purpose and goal of this course module is to present the basic principles of epidemiology and biostatistics and to show how they are an integral part of the practice of medicine. The student will become familiar with the concept of population based (rather than individual based) medicine and will better appreciate disease risk factors, paying particular attention to how demographic, sociocultural, economic, and genetic factors can and do influence disease and healing. At the conclusion of this module, the student should be able to differentiate the types of epidemiologic studies, to determine the nature of causal associations, to understand better the implications of the findings published in medical journals, and to gain a better appreciation for the use of biostatistics in medical research. One hour lecture and two hour seminars.

Second Year

The Public Health faculty participates in the Medicine, Patients, and Society II course. Included in this curriculum are the following Public Health course components:

Public Health and Community Medicine This course, formerly taught as the Third-Year Clerkship in Public Health and Community Medicine, provides field trips in New York City, coordinated with seminar sessions in which field trip experiences and the larger public health issues involved are discussed and evaluated. Literature review is stressed along with first-hand experience in order to arrive at balanced views of major topics in public health as they relate to a metropolitan area. Teaching is conducted in small groups. One session per month for six months with two final sessions devoted to oral presentations provided by each student on a public health topic of their choice.

Introduction to the U.S. Health Care System This introductory module presents an overview of the U.S. health care system. Focus is on how care was financed and delivered pre-Medicare and Medicaid as well as on what factors contributed to the rise of managed care. Topics include changes in physician reimbursement, hospital resource utilization, outcomes and quality assessment research, and cost management strategies. The overall purpose of the module is to help the student understand the dramatic changes that have occurred in health care delivery and financing as well as how these changes affect the practice of medicine. One hour lecture and two hour seminars.

Parasitology and Tropical Medicine (The B.H. Kean Course) Elements of the former Parasitology Course are incorporated in the Basis of Disease component taught in the second year.

Third Year

Public Health and Community Medicine This course provides field trips in New York City, coordinated with seminar sessions in which field trip experiences and the larger public health issues involved are discussed and evaluated. Literature review is stressed along with first-hand experience in order to arrive at balanced views of major topics in public health as they relate to a metropolitan area. Teaching is conducted in small groups. Rotations throughout the year. During 1997-98, the clerkship is also taught to second year students within Medicine, Patients and Society II.

Elective Courses

Electives are offered throughout the four years. They include individually arranged study and research in health economics, in health care delivery problems in New York City, in substance abuse, other public health problems, as well as experience and training in epidemiology at the Centers for Disease Control, Atlanta, Georgia. A full listing of electives is available in the Fourth Year Course Catalog.

Research Opportunities

Students may participate in a wide variety of research programs under the supervision of faculty members. These include health policy studies, quality assurance, drug and alcohol abuse prevention and treatment research, epidemiology and prevention of violence.

Facilities

The completion of the C.V. Starr Pavilion in 1985 has enabled the Department of Radiology to centralize and expand its facilities in a vertical distribution to provide maximal availability to the various clinical services. The main sections of the Radiology Department are located on several floors of the Starr Building. These sections comprise General Radiological service to The New York Hospital inpatients on Starr 9; Computerized Tomographic scanning and Ultrasound on Starr 8; Neuroradiology on Starr 6; Interventional Radiology on L5 and Nuclear Medicine on Starr 2. The department's central offices, conference room, and library are located on Starr 8a.

Other important sections of the department are maintained at locations convenient for patient care: Angiography and Interventional Radiology on L5, Uroradiology on Starr 9, Emergency Radiology, and Ob-Gyn Radiology. An outpatient radiology facility is located adjacent to the lobby of the C.V. Starr Pavilion. The section of Nuclear Magnetic Resonance is located on the basement level adjacent to the Emergency Room building because of structural shielding considerations. The research facilities for the department are located on the sixth floor of the Harkness Research Building. The Department of Radiological Physics at Memorial Hospital provides radiation surveys, calibration, and teaching in radiological physics. Radiation Therapy facilities are located in the Stich Building. Two state-of-the-art MRI Scanners are located in a private office setting at 416 East 55th Street.

Required Courses

The teaching of radiology is integrated within the medical school curriculum. Teaching includes seminars, lectures, conferences, observation, and participation in a variety of elective courses.

First Year

The Radiology faculty participate in the teaching of the Human Structure and Function course during the first year, and the Brain and Mind and Basis of Disease courses during the second year. See Curriculum Overview for description of the courses.

Third Year

Radiology Clerkship. The third year radiology clerkship endeavors to provide the student with a broad overview of general diagnostic radiology and the radiologic subspecialties. All current modalities of medical imaging are covered in the clerkship, with special emphasis on plain film imaging of the chest, abdomen, and the skeletal system for trauma. This is an integral and mandatory part of the third year curriculum. The clerkship is given at the beginning of the third year, and consists of teaching seminars, practical experience, and a computer assisted teaching program termed RADMAC. Afternoons are spent acquiring "hands-on" experience at The New York Hospital and affiliated teaching institutions. The students participate in imaging examinations in neuroradiology, angiography, computed tomographic scanning, magnetic resonance imaging, nuclear medicine, gastrointestinal and uroradiology, and pediatric and bone radiology. The students learn how these examinations are carried out, what the patient will experience, and how the examinations are interpreted. Mornings are devoted to didactic presentations in all of the major fields of radiology. The students' remaining unstructured time is used for self-instruction with the RADMAC program and assigned reading from the course syllabus and textbooks.

Additional instruction in Radiology during the third year is given to students on medical and surgical clerkships, who attend daily housestaff film review of current cases with an attending radiologist.

Elective Courses

During the fourth year, elective modules in advanced diagnostic radiology are offered to students at The New York Hospital, Memorial Hospital, and the Hospital for Special Surgery.

Required Courses

Second Year

Instruction begins in the Medicine, Patients, and Society II course. Sessions are provided in general surgical problems as part of the course in Physical Diagnosis. Instruction is also provided in orthopedic and urologic examination.

Third Year

Surgery Clerkship. The curriculum for the third year provides a core program of clinical instruction in surgery to the student during a twelve-week period. This consolidates all surgical instruction, outside of initial teaching in physical diagnosis in the second year, and leaves the fourth year for elective studies.

The third year class is divided into four sections. Each quarter provides approximately six weeks on the general surgery pavilions. There is also a six week selective period which provides opportunities for rotations through Anesthesia, Cardiothoracic Surgery, Urology, Neurosurgery, Pediatric Surgery, Plastic Surgery and Orthopedics, as well as a trauma rotation at the Jamaica Hospital or Catholic Medical Center. During the general surgery rotation, the student acts as clinical clerk and participates in day-to-day activities in patient care. The student gains experience by taking complete histories and doing physical examinations. The student also evaluates laboratory determinations on assigned patients and has an opportunity to participate in the preoperative preparation. When the patient is operated on, the student may act as part of the operating team to see, first hand, the pathological conditions for which the operation was undertaken. The student attends the rounds held by the residents and members of the senior staff.

Each Thursday at 12:00 p.m., the chairman of the department has a conference with the student body during which various surgical problems are reviewed. On Mondays and Thursdays, from 2 to 5 p.m., seminars are held in which attending surgeons lecture on surgery and its subspecialties. This schedule provides a broad coverage of surgery in its entirety. Ophthalmology and Otorhinolaryngology have been incorporated in the Thursday lectures.

On Mondays, Tuesdays, and Fridays, ward rounds are held by surgeons accompanied by students.

These rounds are oriented toward the particular patients and problems available on the floor each time. The last week of the surgical clerkship is devoted to oral exams.

Elective Courses

Fourth Year

In the fourth year, the Department of Surgery offers a variety of electives, including experiences in clinical fields as well as in research laboratories.

These are fully outlined in the Fourth Year Course Catalog. It is at this time that the students have an opportunity to work in the Burn Center to fulfill subinternship selective requirements.

Required Courses

First Year

As part of the Gross Anatomy component of Human, Structure and Function, faculty and house staff from the Department of Urology assist in the dissection of the pelvis and are available to assist in tutorial sessions.

Second Year

As part of the Physical Diagnosis component of the Medicine, Patients, and Society II course, the students are introduced to the physical examination of the genitourinary tract. As part of the primary care clerkship students will be exposed to the medical management of urologic disease including the management of benign prostatic hyperplasia, recurrent nephrolithiasis, urinary tract infections, microhematuria, urinary incontinence and other voiding dysfunction, and obstructive uropathy. In addition, they will have the opportunity to familiarize themselves with surgical procedures including extirpative surgery for malignancies and reconstructive surgery.

Third Year

Surgery Clerkship. The class is divided into eight groups. There is an elective rotation in urology, available for some students, as part of the surgery clerkship. Electives are available in urology for either two or four week periods during the rotation.

The Edward L. Keyes Fellowship was established under the trust of Elizabeth Keyes Cook in memory of the late Edward L. Keyes. Income from this endowed fund is awarded annually to a postdoctoral fellow in the field of urology, as determined by the Chief of the Cornell University Medical College Department of Urology.

Elective Courses

The Department of Urology has active research laboratories involved in oncology, reproductive biology, pediatric urology, urinary tract obstruction, prostatic diseases, and neurourology. If students have an interest in urology they are encouraged to pursue clinical or basic research with a urology faculty member during the summer following the first year of medical school.

Fourth year students are encouraged to take a clinical externship for a module in the Department of Urology. The rotation is an acting externship with hands-on responsibility. It is helpful for both students going into urology and students who desire more information concerning this specialty even though they plan to pursue other specialties.

In addition, further electives in the research laboratories are available for fourth year students, as described in the Fourth Year Course Catalog.

STUDENT LIFE

Although part of a large, world renowned biomedical complex, Cornell University Medical College can be seen at the same time as a small, well-defined community. Not only do 95% of Medical College students live within a three-block area surrounding the classrooms and laboratories, but also the college's upper East Side location in Manhattan offers comfort and convenience as a self-contained, safe, residential neighborhood.

This unique community is dramatically augmented by its location within one of the world's great cities, a city that classes of Cornell students learn to explore and enjoy each year. New York City presents to students of the Medical College an unparalleled range of cultural and recreational activities, many within walking distance, and all easily accessible by public transportation. The exciting island of Manhattan is only thirteen miles long and much of the world's best art, music, theater, cinema, sports, and food is literally at the doorstep of every Medical College student.

Housing

Cornell University Medical College provides furnished housing to its students, in one of three University-owned buildings. F.W. Olin Hall, located at 445 East 69th Street, is directly across from the York Avenue entrance to the Medical College. The ten-story Olin Hall contains 200 living units, a kitchen on each student floor, plus a gymnasium, student lounge, and library. Each student room is furnished as a single bedroom-study. Since two rooms have a connecting bath, they are used as a suite for two students. First-year students requiring single accommodations live in Olin Hall.

Housing for all upper-class students is provided in The Livingston-Farrand Apartments and in the Jacob S. Lasdon House. Both buildings contain studio, one-bedroom, and two-bedroom apartments. To provide maximum utilization of housing space, two single students are assigned to one-bedroom apartments, while three single students are assigned to two-bedroom apartments. A limited number of Livingston-Farrand studios are available for single upper-class students. Accommodations for couples and families are assigned based on family size, need and availability.

Medical College students pay rents that are below standard rent levels on the upper East Side. The student housing fee for Olin Hall in 1997-1998 is $355 per month. In Lasdon House and Livingston-Farrand, fees per student in shared apartments

Entrance to the Jacob S. Lasdon House, located at 420 East 70th Street, where most medical students are housed average $455 per month. Housing fees in all buildings are subject to change.

Campus Security Report

Cornell University Medical College and Graduate School of Medical Sciences annually distribute a campus security report to all students and employees which contains descriptions of policies and procedures for reporting crimes and emergencies and provides campus crime data. The report lists telephone numbers and contact information for security in campus facilities and residences. Policies and procedures for handling sex offenses and programs for victims are also described. Copies of the current annual security report are available to prospective students and employees upon request at the Office of Admissions or the Office of Human Resources.

HEALTH CARE

The Medical College is dedicated to providing the finest medical care to its students.

Prior to matriculation, students must have a general health examination, which includes a physical examination, chest x-ray and basic laboratory tests, performed by their personal physician with the results forwarded to the Medical College's Student Health Service.

All students must have comprehensive health care coverage. The Medical College has designed a remarkably low-cost comprehensive package which should meet the needs of most students and dependents. The program consists of 2 integrated components- a Student Health Service (SHS) and a BlueChoice Point-of-Service (POS) managed care plan which utilizes the physicians and institutions of the Medical Center. In brief, students who use the coordinated program - SHS and BlueChoice POS plan - will have their choice of participating physicians (the vast majority of faculty) without deductible co-insurance or co-payment charges. In this program, students also have the opportunity to go outside the Medical Center's network but are responsible for deductibles, co-insurance and co-payment fees.

Student Health Service (SHS)

All students must participate. The mandatory fee for 1997-1998 is $400 a year. Dependent coverage is optional, but each dependent over the age of 18 may be enrolled at a cost of $400 a year. Dependents under the age of 18 are not seen in the SHS. With the Medical College's BlueChoice POS plan for families, dependents under the age of 18 are fully covered for all care if they are seen by participating pediatricians.

The SHS Medical Director is the primary care provider for all students. In conjunction with nurses, all non-emergency medical problems and preventive care are managed at the SHS. After hours and on weekends, coverage for emergencies is provided by on-call physicians. Benefits of the SHS include vaccinations (Hepatitis B, Tetanus/Diphtheria, Measles, Mumps, Rubella and Varicella, if needed) and TB screening - all at no charge to students. Prescription medications in The New York Hospital formulary can also be obtained at no charge. Dental care including a free examination, x-rays and annual cleaning is also provided as well as other dental care at the cost of the materials and laboratory charges.

The SHS is the integral and essential link with the BlueChoice POS plan and co-ordinates all activities related to health care in the ambulatory and hospital settings. The SHS Medical Director determines the need and appropriateness of referrals to specialists/subspecialists.

While all students must participate in the SHS, participation in the Medical College's health insurance plan is optional, but the student must provide evidence of being enrolled in a comparable insurance plan in order to waive participation in the BlueChoice POS plan. Students with other health insurance policies are responsible for determining the specific benefits, limitations and differences of their policies from the BlueChoice plan as well as filling out required forms and settling financial issues with their insurance company. These students may also be limited in their choice of specialist referral depending on which of the Cornell faculty participate in their specific insurance plan.

Students using the exercise and weight room in Olin Hall

Health Insurance Plan

The BlueChoice POS plan is a new and distinctive plan developed in conjunction with Empire Blue Cross and Blue Shield and is specifically tailored to meet the needs of our students. The cost for 1997-1998 is $1487 for an individual and $2975 for a family (student and 1 or more dependents). Benefits include no deductibles or co-insurance, no forms to fill out or to file, unlimited lifetime benefits, a prescription plan for non-NYH formulary medications, national and international hospital care, out-of-area emergency care and a highly confidential mental health program with a generous visit schedule.

Each incoming student receives detailed information concerning the SHS and a complete statement of the benefits available under the BlueChoice POS plan. Enrollment is at the time of registration and semiannually thereafter.

Long Term Disability Insurance

Cornell University Medical College provides a disability plan that will pay a monthly benefit in the event a student becomes disabled. In addition, this coverage allows the student to continue the disability policy after graduation and it may be expanded as income increases in future years. The fee for long term disability insurance is $45 annually for first and second year students, and $67.50 annually for third and fourth year students.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS AND SOCIETIES

Student organizations at the Medical College are many and varied. They represent the interests of the student body with the current focus on community service and international exchange. In addition to the student government, the Medical Student Executive Council, and its committees, Cornell has chapters of many national medical organizations and representatives of the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC-OSR). These include the American Medical Student Association (AMSA), American Medical Women's Association (AMWA), American Medical Association-Student Section (AMA), the Student National Medical Association (SNMA) and the Boricua Latino Health Organization (BLHO). These organizations and others involving religious, ethnic and political activities sponsor social events, lectures and outreach projects open to all. Other groups have formed around music, literature, art, film and photography interests. Students participate in jogging, swimming, soccer, basketball, aerobics, squash, volleyball, weightlifting and tennis at or near the campus.

A Cultural Committee provides information on inexpensive cultural opportunities in New York City, with low priced tickets available through an endowed fund from an alumnus.

Following is a more complete description of some of the student organizations:

American Medical Association (AMA) Student

Section. Cornell's student chapter of the American Medical Association is active in teaching about AIDS to high school students, as well as in other areas of national concern to future physicians.

American Medical Student Association (AMSA)

is a national organization. There are fourteen national task forces concerned with areas such as International Health, Minority Affairs, Aging, and Adolescent Health. At Cornell, AMSA enables students to investigate areas of medicine not included in the curriculum through meetings and projects which have a direct impact on the community.

Alpha Omega Alpha (AΩA), the national honor medical society, established a chapter at the Medical College in 1910. Membership is based upon outstanding scholastic achievement in the Medical College curriculum. The chapter sponsors a visiting professorship and an annual lecture.

Members elected from the graduating class of 1997 were: William T. Curry, Jr., Timothy H. Dellit, Jill E. Donovan, Jonathan J. Fillmore, Winnie Y. Hahn, Jill A. Jacobson, Ari B. Jaffe, Erin E. Kershaw, Sheila K. Partridge, Arash Salemi, David H. Stockwell III, Edwin P. Su, Peter G. Sultan, Sarah G. Thompson, Paul J. Tortolani, Apostolos J. Tsiouris, Steven H. Van Dam, G. Edward Vates.

In addition, the following were elected junior members in AΩA based on their outstanding performance during the first two years in the Medical College: Mona Deora, Aaron J. Milbank, Andrew W. Tai, Kerri Beth Tomao.

Medical Student Executive Council (MSEC) is the equivalent of student government at the Medical College. Composed of four elected representatives, and underrepresented minority representative, and the president of each class, MSEC acts as a liaison between the administration and students to coordinate student activities and form student opinion. MSEC appoints student members to Faculty Councils and provides funding for a large number of student activities.

Office of Community Service. The Office of Community Service was originally established with the help of a Department of Education grant. It is now supported by an endowment established by the classes of 1947, 1957, 1966, 1967, 1972, 1973, and 1995, the Parents Fund, and a generous gift from the Dyson Foundation. A coordinator assists individual students and their organizations in identifying community service opportunities in New York City. Students are involved during the year and in the summer after first year in a wide range of activities including teaching about health, nutrition and substance abuse at all levels, first aid to the homeless, support for the elderly and for AIDS patients.

Office of Women in Medicine (OWIM). The Office of Women in Medicine is an organization composed of women physicians, faculty members, house staff, and students associated with Cornell University Medical College and its affiliated institutions. OWIM works closely with the Cornell branch of the American Medical Women's Association. OWIM sponsors and co-sponsors a variety of events each year, including movies, speakers, and workshops dealing with women and health care.

Phi Delta Epsilon. A revitalized Alpha Chapter of this national fraternity, founded at Cornell early in this century, was organized in 1985. Phi Delta is active in community service, and serves as a clearing house for international projects.

Students for Equal Opportunity in Medicine (SEOM). Students for Equal Opportunity in Medicine is an organization of minority students at Cornell University Medical College. The organization currently includes nationally recognized chapters of the Student National Medical Association (SNMA), and Boricua Latino Health Organization (BLHO). The goals of the organization are: to increase the recruitment and retention of Blacks, Latinos, and other underrepresented groups at the Medical College; to provide a forum in which issues relating to the aforementioned groups may be aired; and to plan and implement outreach programs in the neighboring Black and Latino communities, such as health screenings and high school projects.

STANDING COMMITTEES

MEDICAL EDUCATION COUNCIL

The Curriculum Committee has been replaced by a governing and coordinating structure that is representative of the new reality created by the recent curricular reform which integrates basic and clinical sciences across all four years, and delivers the instructional program by a variety of teaching formats. The new structure consists of The Medical Education Council (MEC) and six committees, each responsible for the following aspects of medical education: core basic sciences curriculum, advanced basic sciences curriculum, clinical curriculum, curriculum and faculty evaluation, admission to medical school, and student assessment, promotion and graduation. The MEC is the steering committee for all policy decisions involving the educational programs of the Medical College. The Council's authority ranges across the continuum of undergraduate medical education, beginning with the admissions process and extending throughout all four years of the medical school. All major educational policy decisions and curriculum changes must be approved by the MEC. Members may initiate policy changes affecting the educational program or discuss and act upon recommendations referred from other sources, specifically the six constituting committees. Until the new curriculum is fully implemented, the MEC also has operational responsibility for its planning, and implementation.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION AND OFFICE OF ALUMNI RELATIONS

The Office of Alumni Relations and Annual Giving is the center for all the Medical College's alumni activities. The office supports the Cornell University Medical College Alumni Association for Medical College graduates; the Cornell University Graduate School of Medical Sciences graduates (CUGMS); as well as The New York Hospital - Cornell Medical Center Alumni Council (CAC); for those who have trained or have been on the professional staff at The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center.

The staff coordinates events and activities sponsored by the alumni associations, maintains the database of alumni information, produces periodic alumni directories, and works with class representatives to compile updates for the Cornell University Medical College Alumni Magazine. The CUMC Alumni Association Board of Directors, alumni from all years; the CUGMS Alumni Association; the CAC Alumni Association and the office staff work together to plan the biennial reunion weekend of scientific programs and social events. Through the Medical College Fund, alumni, students, and staff build support for unrestricted giving and special projects.

All Medical College graduates are members of the Cornell University Medical College Alumni Association. Through its dues revenue, the Association sponsors activities for alumni and students, including a welcome reception for the first-year class, co-sponsorship of the senior formal, the taping of the Annual Student Holiday Shows, graduation portraits for all fourth year students, contributions to the Medical Student Executive Council, contributions to the Samaritan, career seminars, summer research fellowships, The Sherlock Prize, The Wade Trauma Lecture and a money management workshop. In 1994, the Alumni Association established a new scholarship fund for medical students.

The Board of Directors of the Alumni Association is elected by the membership at the biennial reunion. Officers are elected to serve two year terms. Each Medical College class elects two student representatives to serve on the board.

The CUMC Alumni Association officers for 1997-98 are:

President: Susan C. Stewart, '66

Vice President: John J. Caronna, '65

Secretary: Paul F. Miskovitz, '75

Treasurer: Thomas P. McGovern, '74
